Fire Blacks Out CBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — It will be between two days and a week before full TV and FM radio service will be restored to Vancouver Island following a fire which destroyed CBC transmitters on Mount Seymour early Sunday morning.

CBC regional engineer Jim Wighton said today engineers were already patching together a makeshift group of transmitters to replace those destroyed in the fire.

Damage in the blaze, which destroyed four transmitters and a microwave relay in the mountaintop station, is estimated at between $2 million and $3 million.

Wighton said AM radio service was restored by 8 a.m. Sunday by B.C. Telephone, which ran the program in by telephone line.

The program was originally relayed to Vancouver by the Seymour microwave unit, he said.

English and French television service was restored in Vancouver by hooking it up to local cablevision, he said.

The television service is so far limited to Vancouver, Wighton said. "People in areas like Port Alberni, Ucluelet, Chilliwack, Hope, Yale, Bowen Island and Squamish aren't getting any yet," he said. "Their only way of getting service was through the transmitter."

The same applies to Greater Victoria, he added.

But regular programming on Victoria's CHEK Television, which carries both CBC and CTV programs, is unaffected by the knocked-out transmitters.

CHEK production manager Roy Gardner said today the station receives its CBC service not via the transmitters but by B.C. Tel microwave feed.

CHEK carries approximately 20 per cent of the usual CBC programming output.

CBC is bringing in an FM radio transmitter originally slated for Penticton today, Wighton said. They are also returning another FM transmitter which will probably be installed today, he said.

"It won't be full power, but it will be back to normal," he said.

And CBC in Kelowna is loaning Vancouver a Channel 2 transmitter which will also arrive today, Wighton said.

North Vancouver chief fire prevention officer Jerry Waddell said the cause of the fire is not immediately known.

Minnesota North Stars and Chicago Black Hawks finished as they played through most of the National Hockey League schedule — both lost two weekend games, but it didn't matter. They are in the weak Smythe Division and both qualified for playoffs, which open on four fronts Tuesday. As expected Montreal Canadiens finished in style, setting a flock of records. Page 14.

Pakistani Women Storm Jail

HYDERABAD, Pakistan (Reuter) — Thousands of women stormed a police station here and released 28 political detainees in an anti-government demonstration over last month's general election.

The women took over the police station in defiance of a ban on public gatherings.

The nine-party opposition Pakistan National Alliance has alleged that the March 7 elections were rigged by the governing Pakistan People's party, which won a landslide victory. It then began a country-wide campaign of agitation that has frequently lead to violence claiming nearly 100 lives.

Que. Breakaway Gains Ground: Poll

MONTREAL (CP) — Support for Quebec independence by Quebec voters has grown slightly while support for the Parti Quebecois is at an all-time high, concludes a poll conducted by CBC radio.

In the CBC Sunday Morning Quebec Survey, 32.4 per cent of respondents to the poll said they would support independence if Quebec maintained economic ties with the rest of Canada.

The poll, conducted by SORECOM Inc. of Montreal, consisted of a telephone survey of 1,200 Quebecers between Feb. 24 and March 2.

About 12 per cent of respondents said they would support independence "if the Quebec government were not able to arrange such an economic association."

However, to a previous question on the independence option without consideration of possible economic association, 16.5 per cent said yes to independence.

Professor Maurice Pinard of McGill University, a consultant on the poll, said the figures indicate the importance of the wording to be used in a future government referendum on independence. He added that the figure indicates "only a very slow growth in support for independence," if data from opinion surveys of the last 15 years is compared with results of the latest poll.

The poll shows the highest popularity ever for the Parti Quebecois, with 57 per cent saying they would vote for the PQ in a provincial election. The opposition Liberal Party and the Union Nationale trailed with 21 per cent and 19 per cent respectively.

Meanwhile, only 37 per cent of Parti Quebecois supporters said they favor independence.

Asked how they feel things are going in Quebec right now, 42 per cent answered very well or quite well. Professor Pinard noted that this is up substantially from 25 per cent in a poll conducted just before the Parti Quebecois came to power Nov. 15.

Support for the federal Liberal government is also high, with 52 per cent of respondents indicating satisfaction with the federal government.

Sixty-seven per cent of respondents said they have "a lot" or "some" confidence in Prime Minister Trudeau, and 62 per cent expressed the same confidence for Premier Levesque.

Cancer Forum Slated

The Victoria Times and the Canadian Cancer Society are once again joining forces to present an open forum this month entitled "Cancer Is a Family Affair."

The free forum will be held Monday, April 18, in the Newcombe Auditorium of the Provincial Museum and will deal with the necessity of open discussion within the family about the disease and related symptoms leading to early diagnosis and treatment.

In addition to two films Checkpoint and BSE — a distinguished panel of experts will be on hand to answer written questions from the audience. Those taking part will be: Dr. Peter Coy, director of the Victoria Cancer Clinic; Dr. Gordon Lott, physician and surgeon; Dr. Malcolm Bridgen, medical oncologist; Mrs. N. Barber, RN, Victoria Cancer Clinic; and Wilfred Burton, executive officer, Canadian Cancer Society, Victoria.

While admission to the forum will be free, the limited seating capacity of the auditorium makes it necessary to limit admission to those who have obtained tickets prior to April 18.

There will be 500 tickets available and they can be obtained at the Victoria Times office, 2621 Douglas, or from the Canadian Cancer Society office at 857 Caledonia from this Wednesday afternoon on.

Tickets may also be ordered by mail through a coupon which will appear in an ad in the Victoria Times commencing Tuesday. Sorry, but we cannot accept telephone orders for tickets.

Due to the limited number of seats available, all those interested in attending the forum are urged to order or pick up their tickets as soon as possible from Wednesday afternoon on.

Settlement Made In Export Gas Row

Settlement of an international dispute which threatened to land both B.C. and the Vancouver-based pipeline company Westcoast Transmission in court was announced today.

The negotiated agreement — revealed by Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Jim Chabot — appears, however, to be similar to terms Premier Bill Bennett said earlier the province wanted to avoid.

Under it, the province has agreed to allow an Alberta natural gas firm to take up the slack of a major gas contract with the U.S. which B.C. can no longer fulfil.

Under the terms of the agreement worked out at a meeting in Victoria last week Pan-Alberta Gas Ltd. will supply to Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Washington State a minimum of 104 million cubic feet a day and a maximum of 200 million cubic feet a day for the next 12 years.

B.C. is committed to transmitting 104 million cubic feet a day of Alberta gas to the U.S. gas company for 12 years, although this may rise to 145 million cubic feet a day at B.C.'s option.

For the first five years of the 12-year period B.C. is also committed to transmit 55 million cubic feet a day to the U.S., but that part of the contract is up for re-negotiation after five years at which time B.C. hopes to be able to supply that gas on its own.

Both Bennett and Energy Minister Jack Davis earlier expressed reservations at a lengthy contract with Alberta and favored a short term, three-year-agreement for Alberta to supply surplus gas to the U.S.

In 1969, B.C. signed a 20-year-agreement with the U.S. to supply 809 million cubic feet a day of natural gas.

In recent years flooding of gas fields in Northern B.C. has drastically decreased B.C.'s gas supply and in 1976, the shortfall on the U.S. contract reached 226 million cubic feet a day.

Alberta, which has surplus gas, offered to take up the slack but the B.C. government balked at giving its approval saying it would reduce the incentive for B.C. gas companies to increase exploration efforts in the north east of the province.

Under the 20-year contract with the U.S. the only excuse for not supplying the committed gas was that B.C. didn't have enough for its own use.

But Northwest Pipeline argued that B.C. was legally bound to accept the Alberta offer of surplus gas and threatened to take the government to court to force the point.

Squatters Jailed

Four squatters on MacMillan Bloedel land west of Shawnigan Lake were ordered to jail today for 10 days for contempt of B.C. Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan had given Fred Anderson, Peter Anderson, Heather Cousins and Richard Houle 30 days to vacate the property in an order Jan. 27.

But David Williams, counsel for MacMillan Bloedel, told Ruttan they were still on the property.

Ruttan said the continued flouting of the court has "turned this into a mockery of the administration of justice."

None of the four appeared in court today but lawyer Bruce McConnan appeared for Fred Anderson seeking an adjournment until this afternoon because Anderson had told him he couldn't start his car this morning.

The four persons have been living near Wild Deer Creek, 10 miles south of Duncan and nine miles west of Shawnigan.

U.K. Airport in Chaos As Staff Bans Overtime

LONDON (Reuter) — Heathrow airport faced chaos today with thousands of travellers stranded because of a ban on overtime and night shift work by maintenance engineers of the state-run British Airways.

A British Airways spokesman said Sunday night that all domestic and European flights will be cancelled at least for 24 hours with some intercontinental flights affected also.

About 10,000 passengers were hit by the ban Sunday. Many were unable to find seats on other airlines and spent the night on the airport floor.

The spokesman said that if the ground staff continues its unofficial action the company will probably be forced within a few days to cancel all flights. The action is costing British Airways an estimated $4.5 million a day.

The men, members of the Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers, are refusing to work night overtime and, from today, all weekend shifts, in support of demands for separate negotiating rights and more pay.

Intercontinental flights cancelled today include those to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Hong Kong, Karachi, Doha, Melbourne, Khartoum and Mexico.

British Airways' officials feared chaos at Heathrow might increase today when the engineers all plan to report for the day shift simultaneously. Usually the day is divided into three shifts.

The airline has appealed to them to stay at home unless on duty. "There is just no room for them," said an airport security official.

Another worry is that as the number of cancellations increase, traffic will be brought to a standstill and the chaos spread to other airlines.

The engineers are holding a meeting of union officials later today to decide what steps to take next. The union executive has not endorsed the ban.

MYSTERY POLLUTION KILLS BIRDS

SEATTLE (AP) — More than 300 oil-soaked gulls which washed ashore on the Washington coast near Willapa Bay in southern Washington Saturday were being cleaned while an unknown number of others were dead on the beach, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said Sunday.

"No source of pollution is evident or has been located," said Lieutenant Jg. G. Robert Stevens.

Stevens said the birds were first discovered on the beach near Grayland, Wash., Saturday morning by area residents and were still washing up on the beach Sunday.

The federal department of interior is in charge of the bird recovery operation and has set up a clinic at the Long Island Wildlife Refuge, he said.

Polygraph Curbs Urged By Police Commission

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

B.C. Police Commission recommendations calling for tighter controls on the use of lie detectors in the province are expected to come before the legislature later this month.

Commission chairman Dr. John Hogarth said today he is completing a report to Attorney General Garde Gardom on the question of polygraph use in B.C.

Hogarth said the report calls for a number of legislative changes.

"Obviously it's too late to do anything this session (of the legislature) . . . my hope is that the minister may see fit to table it as a kind of green paper that will stimulate discussion," he said.

Hogarth said the paper consists of the findings and recommendations of a special task force which has been studying the matter, plus a number of recommendations from the commission itself.

He said the task force essentially calls for a polygraph board to keep the charlatans out, while the commission has tempered that with more conservative recommendations.

Hogarth said he could not discuss the paper until after it has been tabled in the legislature but, "there are some real problems (with lie detector

REVENGE AT LAST FROM PESKY BELL

GILLINGHAM, England (UPI)—On the day he retired Horace Whittell brought to work the alarm clock which awakened him at 6 a.m. for 47 years and flattened it under an 80-ton press.

"It was a lovely feeling," said 62-year-old Whittell, a Chatham Dockyard worker since 1930.

"I came to loathe that bell. It had to be loud to have any effect on me. Now I shall lie in until 9 a.m. every day."

Coffee Smugglers Burned Alive

NAIROBI (AP) — Ugandan troops have executed a gang of coffee smugglers by burning them alive on an island in Lake Victoria, the Kenyan newspaper The Nation said today.

The paper, quoting what it called reliable sources, said the smugglers were captured while running coffee across the lake from Uganda into Kenya for shipment abroad.

The men were taken to Kigulu Island by the soldiers "and told to lie down," The Nation said. Then "they were covered with empty sacks and petrol was poured over them. They were then set alight."

The reported executions were believed to be in retaliation for the killing of a soldier by smugglers in an earlier clash, the paper added.

In that incident, a Ugandan army helicopter opened fire on a smugglers' boat on Lake Victoria. The smugglers fired back, killing the soldier and forcing the helicopter to crashland on Kigulu.

Several smugglers have been reported slain in clashes with the Ugandan military and between rival gangs in recent weeks as coffee smuggling has mushroomed into a major racket in East Africa because of high world coffee prices.

Ugandan army helicopters have patrolled Lake Victoria and the Kenyan border in the last few weeks in a growing campaign to smash the smuggling gangs. Kenyan officials have also mounted a major anti-smuggling operation.

Both governments are alarmed at the escalation of a racket that robs them of much needed foreign currency from official coffee exports.

Authorities here are also concerned that low-grade Ugandan coffee smuggled into Kenya is mixed with high-grade Kenyan coffee and then sold on the international market with a Kenyan label.

Energy: Canada, U.S. 'Must Co-operate'

MONTREAL (CP) — Thomas Enders, U.S. ambassador to Canada, appealed at the weekend for closer co-operation between Canada and the United States, saying that the two countries must stand together in face of the energy crisis.

But his vision of new era of co-operation was challenged by Eric Kierans, who said the Mackenzie Valley pipeline would be a "financial boondoggle" which would bring no over-all benefits for Canada.

The two men were attending a seminar on Canadian-American relations which drew about 100 businessmen and management students to McGill University to hear a range of speakers, including Jean Chretien, federal minister of industry, trade and commerce.

Enders, who led off the all-day session, set the tone with an appeal for closer economic co-operation, while Chretien concluded the meeting with a declaration that Canadian-American relations are "in good health" and improving.

Most other speakers stressed the mutuel benefit of economic links between the two countries, with only Kierans, a former federal cabinet minister and fervent Canadian nationalist, concentrating on sources of potential conflict.

Enders said that in energy, the two countries must stand together to meet "serious trouble that is going to get worse."

Government projections indicate that the United States, which now relies on foreign sources for 50 per cent of its petroleum, might face the loss of two million jobs and $800 million to $900 million in gross national product if the Arab oil embargo were renewed.

Meanwhile, Enders said, Canada has had to cut down on energy exports and faces the prospect of becoming a net importer of energy.

By 1981, almost all Canadian oil will be consumed at home, he said. Natural gas exports to the United States may continue, "but by the mid-1980s we expect there will be about as much coal going from the United States to Canada — mainly to generate electricity in Ontario — as there is gas coming from Canada to us."

The one-sided drain of energy toward the United States that once disturbed Canadian nationalists is a thing of the past, he said.

"The trade across the border in energy — a two-way trade — will go on, but it will become less important. There might, for example, be room for greater exchanges of electricity than in the past.

"But what is more important is to agree on long-term measures such as conservation and reduction of energy consumption."

But Kierans, who left the Trudeau cabinet partly because he disagreed with its policy in the late 1960s of allowing easy American access to Canadian resources, argued that the persistent conflict between the two counties can be seen in the American thirst for Alaska's natural gas. To the Americans, this makes a pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley to the United States midwest seem attractive.

"I have no objection to a pipeline as such," he said.

"But we have people comparing it with the Canadian Pacific Railway and arguing that it's in the Canadian national interest for us to participate in building it.

"In fact it's a financial boondoggle, which will bring us no over-all benefit. As far as the bankers are concerned, we might as well build pyramids as pipelines in the Mackenzie, as long as the banks get their three per cent off the top.

"Meanwhile the money tied up there is not available for other projects, and if we have other priorities such as housing, so much the worse for us."

Botulism Strikes 30 in Michigan

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Health officials Sunday increased to 30 the number of confirmed botulism cases among patrons of a Mexican food restaurant, making the outbreak the worst in U.S. history.

The new total of food poisoning cases at five hospitals came as the Centre for Disease Control in Atlanta confirmed that canned hot green peppers were the source of the deadly poison. Three patients were in critical condition.

Dr. Robert Locey, Oakland County health director, said the peppers served in hot sauce at Trini and Carmen's Mexican Restaurant last week were improperly home-canned by a former employee.

Medical records had listed a 1921 botulism outbreak in Michigan as the worst in history. Tainted spinach was blamed for 29 poisoning cases. Botulism toxin is the deadliest known to man, more powerful than cobra venom or curare.

Locey said authorities were retracing their search for possible victims and were looking for customers who may have purchased carry-out orders.

"In the hands of a well trained operator it appears to be a technique that can get at the truth, but it can also be open to abuse, and aside from the technical questions, is it right for an employer to use it?" Hogarth said.

Hogarth added that the commission is studying only the role polygraphs play in law enforcement in B.C.

"It wouldn't be proper for us to comment in the employer-employee relationship . . . we only come to that indirectly."

The question of whether or not employers should be allowed to subject employees to lie detector tests was raised last week by a union seeking certification in B.C.'s banking industry.

In letters to the attorney-general's office, the police commission, and the Human Rights Branch, the United Bank Workers local of the Service, Office and Retail Workers of Canada has asked that banks be restricted from testing their employees with polygraphs.

Human rights director Kathleen Ruff said the letter she received was the first indication she'd ever had that B.C. employers might be using lie detectors.

"Either this doesn't happen very much or it just hasn't been reported before," she said.

Ms. Ruff said the branch can take no action on the matter because the human rights code doesn't apply in this area but, "I think there definately is a problem of abuse where they can be wrongly used."

THE OUTCASTS by Ben Wicks

FLIPPERS FOR SALE

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Flippers were selling for $20 a dozen and seal carcases for $7 each today as the 30 crew members of the Lady Johnson Two sold the delicacies that give them extra money from the annual seal hunt.

The ship, with the pelts of 7,250 harp seals and 750 hooded seals aboard, arrived Sunday night, the first of six Canadian and five Norwegian vessels to return to port.

The pelts are to be unloaded later at a plant in Dildo on Newfoundland's east coast Trinity Bay.

Crew members of sealing ships are permitted to sell whole carcasses and flippers they have gathered during the hunt. The first ship to arrive gets the highest prices.

The major income for crew members comes from their share of the landed value of the pelts. Last year crew members of Canadian ships earned up to $2,300 each.

Captain Morrisey Johnson said the ship had taken less than her quota of about 10,000 harps because it had to be prepared for a charger trip laster this month.

The other ships still were hunting in the icepack off northern Newfoundland.

Restaurants Bombed, Police Blame IRA

From AP-Reuter

BELFAST (CP) — Bomb blasts ripped through two downtown restaurants packed with lunchtime customers today, injuring at least 40 persons, including some children, police reported. They blamed the Irish Republican Army for the bombings.

The bombers apparently penetrated the tight security cordon around central Belfast to plant the charges in Rosemary's Cafe and Isobel's coffee shop, two popular lunchhour meeting places 50 yards apart, a police spokesman said.

Several diners were blown into the street by the explosion at Isobel's. Passers-by clawed at the smoking debris to drag casualties to safety.

One of the injured was a baby, police reported. "I helped three toddlers who were in one of the cafes buying chips," one rescuer said. "Their clothes were shredded and they were cut by glass. The kids were screaming in terror. How can people do this to little children?"

The bombs exploded within seconds of each other. Police said a telephoned warning about the bomb in Rosemary's Cafe was received seconds before the explosion there, but no warning was given for the other bomb.

Police were working on the theory that the timing of the second blast was designed to catch people fleeing the first explosion.

"People were starting to run down the street and all over the place after the first blast, some in the direction of the second cafe," said a store employee, Elizabeth Darley.

To plant the bombs, the guerrillas penetrated the so-called "ring-of-steel" security zone set up around the city centre.

The area is blocked by security gates, where all pedestrians are checked and often searched by police and only buses and delivery vans admitted.

There have been 41 deaths from guerrilla attacks this year in Northern Ireland, where the outlawed Irish Republican Army is seeking an end to British authority.

Indonesia Nickel Mine

SOROAKO, Indonesia (AP) — President Suharto has opened a new $850-million nickel mine, a majority-owned subsidiary of Inco Ltd. of Canada, in the jungles of South Sulawesi, making Indonesia one of the world's largest nickel-producing countries outside the Communist bloc.

The project, which employs about 11,000 men, will bring a gross annual income of $255 million once it reaches full production next year.

Loggers Hit Back At Environmentalists

SPOKANE (AP) — Delegates to the Intermountain Logging Conference ended a four-day convention by passing four resolutions — two of them aimed at thwarting goals of environmentalists.

One resolution said loggers, because of their knowledge of the woods, should be the last persons to be excluded from the timberlands this summer if forests are closed by the likelihood of fire.

The 1,200 timber industry representatives from Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Montana and British Columbia passed resolutions calling for defeat of the Montana Wilderness Study and the endangered American Wilderness Acts and urging United States government spending for control of insects which threaten western forests.

Spring weather was at its best for most of B.C. over the weekend. On Sunday several localities tied or broke previous record maximum temperatures for the day. Kamloops at 25 degrees was the warmest breaking the previous mark of 24 set in 1944. A ridge of high pressure which is responsible for the fair weather will begin to move over the province today. As a result sunny skies will continue for areas with the exception of occasional morning fog patches. Near record or record high temperatures are expected in many interior valleys. The over-all pattern is only slowly changing and will hold at least through Tuesday. However, the first showers from Pacific disturbances that are deflected north by the ridge should spread to the Charlottes by Tuesday.

Brezhnev Aging Fast and Failing, Say U.S. Doctors

By VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev is a chronically ill, rapidly aging man with a failing heart, speech and hearing difficulties and other medical problems of uncertain nature.

Brezhnev's health is considered vital to the success of the arms negotiations, since it is widely believed that he has been strongly committed to signing an agreement in Washington to cap his career.

"Brezhnev has had heart failure periodically for some time, and his constant companion is a cardiologist who is deputy health minister and also in charge of the Kremlin polyclinic," said one government source.

"Heart failure" in medical terms means a heart that chronically or periodically fails to supply the body with enough blood.

Brezhnev's heart failure was called "mild" but still disabling to the point where Western observers think it highly possible, though they are not certain, that he has had an electronic "cardiac pacemaker" implanted inside his chest.

Reporters noted that both Brezhnev's movements and speech were slurred when he appeared before them.

Such observations made medical observers think of the possibility of either a stroke or brain tumor, although they are far from ready to state a conclusion.

Brezhnev also failed to respond to reporters' questions. Apparently he did not hear them, it was later learned.

He sometimes wears a hearing aid, and during negotiations, it was reported, U.S. officials had to raise their voices to make themselves heard.

"He has had slurred speech caused by recurrent jaw and dental problems for a long time," one medical source said. "That's probably what is bothering him now rather than a stroke, though we don't know for certain. We must just sit back and watch."

The "we," it was explained, refers to a small group of doctors in various federal agencies who scrutinize films and television clips of the Russian leader, interview those who have seen him and gather other snippets of medical information.

Brezhnev's chronic speech problem was triggered by a jaw infection about five years ago, it was stated. That in turn was part of a series of dental problems that made the Russian leader's jaw hurt so much that on one public occasion he took his teeth out and stepped on them.

Even before the SALT talks, it was said, Brezhnev had not been well recently and had missed meetings.

"This is far from a diagnosis," another source cautioned. "He did look bad this week, but he has looked bad sometimes in the past. There is much we don't know."

GUNMAN HIJACKS BUS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A gunman who said he had "nothing better to do" commandeered a Toronto-bound Greyhound bus in Florida on Sunday, threatening passengers, shooting out windows and demanding whisky. He held the terrified passengers hostage for 2½ hours before being overpowered by an FBI agent.

Ronnie Thomas Nance, 28, of Winter Garden, Fla., was charged with 39 counts of kidnapping after the early-morning incident aboard the Orlando-to-Toronto bus.

Neither the driver nor any of the 38 passengers was hurt as Nance fired over the head of one woman and emptied his .38-calibre pistol out the windows and into the ground, authorities said.

Nance was overpowered by an agent who talked his way aboard the bus after police shot out a tire and surrounded the vehicle.

Nance told reporters: "I had nothing better to do — seriously."

Undersheriff John Nelson said Nance told the driver, Robbie Jones of Savannah, Ga., that he had domestic problems and wanted to get to Arkansas fast — for reasons he did not explain.

Nelson said the incident began when Nance, who boarded the bus in Orlando, pulled the gun about 19 miles south of St. Augustine.

A passenger on the bus said the driver got the hijacker some bourbon he wanted.

As the bus went through St. Augustine and northward along U.S. Highway 1, Nance decided he wanted more whisky and the driver agreed to stop and get it, the passenger added.

Nelson said the driver had called police when he bought bourbon the first time, and officers were at the Gator Truck Stop about 25 miles south of Jacksonville when Jones pulled in.

"The hijacker was very upset when the driver didn't come back," the passenger said. "He picked a young boy, put the gun to his head and said, 'I'll blow his brains out.' He hired a shot over a woman's head and others through windows. But he let some people get off to look for the driver."

Twisters Roar Through Michigan

CHARLOTTE, Mich. (AP) — "All we have left is what we're wearing," said Steve Kulikowski, one of more than 130 persons who lost homes this weekend as tornados hit four Lower Michigan counties.

State and municipal officials estimated damage from the storms at more than $2.5 million.

Kulikowski, 26, like many others, lost his home when a tornado roared through the Kalamazoo County farming community of Augusta. Damage in Augusta alone was estimated at more than $1 million.

"We'd just spent all our money on buying food," he said. "And now the refrigerator's gone."

The heaviest damage was reported in Kalamazoo and Eaton counties. Lesser damage also occurred in Livingston and Oakland Counties, authorities said.

The twisters were blamed for the death of one child and injuries to at least 44 other persons. A second death was blamed indirectly on the storm — Donald Merritt, 43, of Eaton Rapids, was electrocuted Sunday as he cleaned up debris.

Law-enforcement officials Sunday issued passes to residents and tried to keep out all but emergency workers because curious motorists hampered cleanup work in a few areas. Crews from Consumers Power Co. said they were unable to reach some downed power lines because traffic blocked roads.

Heavy Pollution In St. Lawrence

QUEBEC (CP) — The St. Lawrence River is so heavily polluted that immediate government action is needed to protect the health of many Quebecers drinking and bathing in its waters, says a preliminary report by a special study group.

The 100-page report by the St. Lawrence study committee, based on a five-year, $5-million study—the most ambitious ever undertaken on the quality of the river's water—has been submitted to federal Environment Minister Romeo LeBlanc and his Quebec counterpart, Marcel Leger.

It recommends immediate government action to close off certain beaches, including those in the Quebec City region, and to alert the public to the danger of practising water sports in some areas of the river.

The report says drinking water drawn from the river in several major Quebec centres, including Montreal and Quebec City, should be inspected immediately for bacteriological contamination.

Fish caught in St. Lawrence waters should also be inspected by the government for contamination by chloride compounds and mercury. Levels of these major pollutants in several kinds of fish caught in the river exceed environment department standards for human consumption, the report says.

The report blames the poor quality of the water on pollution in St. Lawrence tributaries, discharge of polluted water directly into the river and landfill projects along river banks. Severest deterioration in quality was noted in Montreal and Quebec City areas.

The report draws from contributions by 25 federal and provincial departments, several Quebec universities and more than 100 private and public scientific organizations.

The study committee is to submit a comprehensive management plan for the river next year.

Farmland Fiddling

When will the harrassment of the land commission cease? The provincial government keeps after the appointed commission, whose job it is to preserve the small stock of farmland in British Columbia, as if 97 per cent of the province was farmland and three per cent was rocks and mountains and not the other way around as it actually is.

Not content with installing its own handpicked commissioners last fall, the government keeps battering away. Knowing that outright repeal of the Land Commission Act would probably be almost universally unpopular, the government mounts small skirmishes and flank attacks whose eventual aim is the same thing.

The Socred-appointed commission still retains the authority legislated by the former NDP administration, and it can still act independently and in defiance of the express wishes of other government departments and agencies. But.

The commission, for example, refused to delete from the agricultural land reserve 304 acres of Bulkley Valley farmland for a $17 million sawmill. Of course, the commission's job is to preserve farms, not worry about job-creating projects.

What happened after the commission's announcement was very interesting. The B.C. Development Corp., a crown corporation under Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, was furious. The corporation's land development manager issued a scathing denunciation. "I suppose if we shipped oil to the Arctic and grew sunflowers it would be described as the best agricultural land in the region," said Stan Jobb.

Environment Minister Jim Neilsen, who is supposedly the cabinet member who should defend the land commission, instead talked of modifications to the legislation to make the commission "more meaningful."

There appears to be a happy ending to this episode, however. The area's MLA, Jake Kempf (SC—Omineca) said a few days later that he had located a new site for the proposed sawmill. The ease and speed with which he did so suggests the BCDC challenge to the land commission was a setup job, another attempt to batter away at its authority.

That theory gains credibility from developments in the continuing battle over Chilliwhack agricultural land. Even Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt seems afraid to speak up in defence of the preservation of farmland.

Most people thought the question of the status of 1,700 acres of land in Chilliwhack municipality was settled by the recent decision by cabinet — the final authority — to refuse to allow the land out of the farmland reserve.

But Hewitt lately has been talking about a referendum of area residents to determine the issue. It is right and proper to consult the local electorate on some issues, but in this case it is an abdication of legally constituted authority. It is a straightforward matter: is the land in question productive, good quality farmland? The answer is: yes. The land's productivity is a fact, and soil scientists can prove it.

This backing and filling and hedging is hard to reconcile with Hewitt's stated policy of increasing domestic food production. Now, B.C. produces about 43 per cent of its own food requirements. Hewitt said on Wednesday in a speech to the Surrey Co-op. He wants to raise that to 65 per cent by 1966.

It's no pipedream or vision of autarky; the severe drought this year in California where much of our produce originates is just a taste of possible future food shortages.

The government must decide to put a good deal of resources behind domestic food production. It must stop fiddling around in indecision, whittling away at the land commission, and the dwindling supply of farmland in B.C.

Barney's Brave New World

From the Company of Young Canadians to Defence Minister Barney Danson's Youth Corps in just a decade. The route is symbolic of the mental distance travelled by this administration in a short 10 years. The Company of Young Canadians worked so well at upsetting the status quo, the government finally phased it out, pleading lack of funds. Now we are to have a far more structured youth corps that will work on environmental clean-up, park development, erosion control and even with the armed forces.

Somehow this brave new world of Barney Danson's has a bad smell about it. The last thing this country needs is a bunch of regimented drones working for $1 dollar a day and $1,000 payoff at the end of the summer. Perhaps we have too many visions of those news reel films from Germany in the 1930s, or remember tales of government work camps here at home in the same decade. Even Danson's language in describing the $8 million pilot project unnerves Canadian psyches. "The teams will live a modest, spartan life . . . they will be sensitized to the greater problems of today." What irony here. The government will sensitize young people to Canada's endemic problems of energy, dwindling resources and lack of food — problems this administration chooses to ignore as illustrated by its lack of cohesive policies in any of these areas. Not to worry, though, we'll have legions of "sensitized" youth who are aware of these problems, undoubtedly "aware" from the government viewpoint.

Were it not that Canada is at such a dangerous impasse we could pass off this idea as an aberration of a thwarted boy scout. If this is the best the country can do for its unemployed youth we should lower the flag. People need real live creative jobs, not a con job out in the boondocks. In its advertisements Ottawa gaily advises "live, learn, work and share today's ideas for a better tomorrow." Today's ideas don't seem to work very well as illustrated by this mentally bankrupt project. A "better tomorrow" might be envisioned if this inane and potentially dangerous idea is abandoned forthwith.

". . . no, we don't stock pornography . . . you want us to get in trouble with the law? . . ."

RICHARD GWYN

Hoping for a Zig and a Zag

OTTAWA — The Yanks are coming, the Yanks are coming. Or so Finance Minister Donald Macdonald hopes, and so you had better hope also, particularly if you are one of the unemployed.

Before 1977 is out, assuming that Maconald's calculations are correct, more than one million Canadians will be jobless. By the year's end though, the U.S. economic momentum, which is quickening, should have pulled Canada's sluggardly economy along behind it. At the same time, business investment in Canada, stimulated by some complicated but quite clever corporation tax reductions, should be perking up all by itself.

Difficult Conditions

The worst—unemployment peaking at over eight per cent, the "hard reality" that wages will be hard put to keep pace with inflation — is yet to come. This downward zig, Macdonald hopes, will be followed by an upward zag that will continue through 1978, as business invests more and employs more and as those employed spend more and so expand the market for all the extra goods churned out by the new business plant and equipment.

Macdonald's formula of a brighter future in exchange for a bleaker present is based on a calculation concealed between the lines of his budget. By accepting without admitting it very high unemployment, Macdonald will be putting Canada through the kind of economic wringer that the U.S. went through in its deep recession of 1974-75, and from which it emerged in far better competitive shape today than is Canada, which escaped the worst of that recession.

Macdonald made plain his meaning only indirectly.

"The erosion of Canada's competitive position vis-a-vis the U.S. economy is being checked," he said. The problem was that "profit margins and the share of profits in national income have fallen significantly . . . and the business world has been faced with very difficult conditions."

To give business the boost it needed, Macdonald offered a series of intricate, and in several instances, imaginative, tax incentives and cuts. Among these were an expanded investment tax credit system and a tax break for employee profit-sharing schemes.

The total value of these band-aids to business will be $800 million. Almost as important as the substance of the gift itself was the spirit in which it was offered.

"It is essentially the private sector which develops the resources and new technologies that support and enhance the standard of living," said Macdonald. "Governments can provide assistance and incentives, but experience has shown that these decisions are best left in private hands. The efforts of private firms . . . are essential to economic progress."

The private sector had better provide that progress, and the jobs that go with it, because the public sector, in Macdonald's formula, has been removed from most of the action.

For job creation, the finance minister allotted only an extra $100 million, enough for perhaps 10,000 year-round jobs. Government spending restraint made it impossible to find more to throw into the fight, and, as he said at his press conference, "further stimulation would only feed inflation."

Macdonald plainly places almost as little faith in individual spending as the means to get our economy moving again. Personal tax cuts amounted to a nominal $300 million, worth $100-$200 for an "average" taxpayer. For most, inflation, forecast this year at seven per cent, will eat away all of that gain.

Conventional Wisdom

The buck thus stops at business. "With slower growth in real disposable income per person . . . with the continuing policy of government restraint . . . This leaves only business investment and improvement of the external balance of trade as potential driving forces of more rapid growth."

None of this is dramatic in the conventional sense of major tax cuts or of major new programs. The lack of both is the point of the whole budget. Private enterprise instead has become the conventional wisdom.

Just over a year ago, you may recall that Prime Minister Trudeau said "the free market system is dead." He was as wrong, it turns out, to say that as he was a few months later to say that "separatism is dead." Which proves, if nothing else, that for each zig in politics there is a zag. Let's hope that by the end of 1977 both zags are headed upwards.

Ferry Rates

As an operator of a local tourist attraction, I find it most difficult to believe Transport Minister Jack Davis when he states that the doubling of ferry rates has had little effect on the local tourist industry.

Our traffic has been down consistently since last June and always within a percentage point of the amount the traffic is down on the ferries.

His only concern appears to be that the B.C. Ferries as a corporation is making money and he has absolutely no concern that the ferries carry 25 per cent less people to the Island.

Surely the lost revenue to the economy of Vancouver Island and the subsequent lost seven per cent sales tax and income tax to the government on the dollars these travellers would have spent is far more important than the B.C. Ferry Corporation showing a slight profit.

The B.C. Ferry representative tried to justify the rates by saying business is also down in Vancouver and the Lower Mainland to the same extent — of course it would be — people don't drive up to the ferry and turn around when they see the fares, they simply don't come to the Lower Mainland either.

Grace McCarthy has been making excellent speeches all over the province to bolster tourism but in Victoria the other evening she left out part of her speech on the subject of "little annoyances to visitors," she should have added to poor service, discourteous clerks, cold food etc., the excessive ferry rates, especially when a visitor is penalized for an overheight vehicle when the ferry is half empty.

Letters have been written to the editor stating the tourist industry should stop crying the blues about ferry rates and instead stop the so-called rip-off of tourists.

Surveys show that restaurants, accommodation and attraction prices on Vancouver Island compare favorably for the same service and in many cases are less than they are in Vancouver, Seattle, Portland and Los Angeles.

Sir Louis Jetté

These days, the Canadian winds of change blow threats of separatism. But in 1903, the year of the Alaska Boundary Award, Canadians generally, and British Columbians especially, had reason to be grateful to Sir Louis Jette, lieutenant-governor of Quebec.

Mount Jette, in the Cassiar district, and close to the junction of the Alaska, B.C., and Yukon boundaries, reminds us that Louis Jette was one of the "six impartial jurists of repute" who made up the tribunal that was "to consider judicially" the questions involved in the location of the boundary between the Dominion of Canada and what is now often called the Alaska panhandle.

Britain appointed three of the jurists — Lord Alverstone, Lord Chief Justice of England, Sir Louis Jette, and A. B. Aylesworth, one of his majesty's counsels. The United States also appointed three.

The tribunal eventually decided upon a boundary line that was a compromise between the original claims of Britain and the United States. It was not a unanimous decision, but it carried with a simple majority because Lords Alverstone voted with the three Americans. Aylesworth and Jette both filed minority reports.

Sir Louis Jette was thinking as a Canadian, considering the welfare of Canada, although the territory involved was far from Quebec.

His minority report concluded ". . . the majority of the tribunal has adopted a line which, at a number of points of its course, rests on the mountains which lie far from the coast, and are separated from it by nearer ones, which ought consequently to have been chosen in their stead, as the points of demarcation of the line.

"I found it impossible, under such circumstances, to concur in the arbitrary determination of a line which, though it does not concede all the territory they claimed to the United States, nevertheless deprives Canada of the greater part of that to which she was entitled." — Ruth Chambers, 4317 Blenkinsop Road.

Censorship

The editorial page of any newspaper reflects the discernment and thoughtful consideration of its writers. My respect for this page was somewhat shaken by Saturday's issue of March 26.

You deride "Volrich and the vice squad" for trying to clean up pornography. The clumsy method used was at least honestly motivated.

You state that "censorship of any kind is more odious than the vilest pornography." Do you really believe that? No censorship has been the rule for some years now. Things have grown steadily worse.

Your solution to this insidious disease — all pornography should be classified as movies are classified. We are all aware of the dismal failure this conjures. Why categorize pornography? Eliminate it.

Next you suggest that the courts should make obscenity rulings. Our already overworked courts and judges would have time for little else, what with television, radio, magazines and newspapers all going beyond acceptable standards. The "in thing" seems to be to swear, blaspheme, to portray mankind at his beastliest.

So let us turn to page 33 of that same issue of the Victoria Times, and join with the honest Saskatchewan judge in saying, we are "dismayed" at the lack of Christian principles being taught our children. He says that "homosexuals are invited to speak in the schools about their way of life, while those wishing to reintroduce Christian principles are left standing at the door." Our young are victims of our lack of stewardship.

Mr. Editor, please do your part. Phillipians 4, verse 8: "Whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there by any virtue and if there by any praise, think of these things." — Mrs. Thelma E. Macht, 3322 Doncaster Drive.

Sexist Play

On Saturday night, March 26, I saw a play called The Revenger's Tragedy at the Phoenix theatre at the University of Victoria, and was thoroughly disgusted to find that it was no better than an anti-feminist scandal-sheet. That a university should allow such a sexist play to be put on within its bounds in this day and age is absolutely incredible, and I think the public deserves an apology. At one point an actor says: "Wives were meant to go to bed and feed." And there are many more comments of the same ilk.

We have a bill of rights and anti-discrimination laws. Why can't the author be prosecuted? Who is this Cyril Tourneur anyway? He should be sent back to Quebec or wherever he comes from.—Anna Crouch, 1070 Moss Street.

Good Article

Thank you, thank you, thank you for printing Family Doctor Reluctantly Performs Abortions, on page five of your March 24 paper. It is a well thought-out, sensitive view of a tragic and emotional issue. In case some of your readers missed it, I urge them to dig into their stack of papers. It will be well worth the effort. I do not know the physician in question, but I hope that the views expressed in the article are held by many family doctors. — Connie More, 32 Paddon Avenue.

Oil Spills

I am writing in response to an article appearing in the Times March 12, Oil Spills Not Harmful, written by Margot Hornblower of the Washington Post. The article makes some sweeping generalizations from only partial evidence, generalizations which are highly misleading. Possibly the most odious of these is that "there is not much hard evidence that spills have any long-term effect on marine or plant life."

The article claims that more than a dozen papers presented at an oil spill conference in New Orleans show "that nature is absorbing oil spills with little trauma." Hornblower cites a paper on effects of the Chesapeake Bay oil spill of Feb. 2, 1976, on salt marshes of the lower bay, presented by two representatives of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. She states that the study concludes : 1. that the marsh grass was even thicker than normal following the spill, and; 2. that the mussels and oysters inhabiting the marshes were unaffected by the spill. This is true, but she omitted to mention the succeeding explanation that "the impact of the spill on the marshes is thought to have been minimized by virtue of the relatively low toxicity of the oil (as compared to a lighter fuel oil or a crude oil), the time of year the spill occurred (when most of the biota were relatively inactive), and the comparatively high energy environment of the shoreline (which caused the oil to pass quickly from the marshes)."

Hornblower concludes that "the case of the Chesapeake Bay spill . . . is not unusual," and "the danger of oil spills appears to have been exaggerated." On the contrary, given the actual circumstances of the spill, which were favorable to minimal environmental impact, I would contend that this spill was quite unusual. Therefore, it would be mistaken to base broad generalizations on this one particular incident.

A total of 38 papers considering oil spill behavior and effects were presented at the conference in New Orleans. Many of these studies consider the harmful, sometimes lethal, effects of spilled oil on marine, intertidal, and even terrestrial organisms. Local environmental conditions and the nature of the oil are not always such as to avoid severe environmental damage. None of these studies are referred to by Hornblower in her article. This is a classic case of selective reporting, used to support an unjustifiable position. The author's name is particularly apt. She is blowing the horn of the oil industry, which desire to quiet the public rage over oil spills. I would hope you are more discerning in future as to the selection of material you publish.—Gregory Reif, 651 Trutch Street.

Alvin's One Politician Who Remains a Delight

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — A few weeks ago the NDP MP from New Westminster spoke after Alvin Hamilton in the Commons debate on the National Transportation Act. He said:

"I find it a delight to be able to follow the member from Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain . . . I do not think I have ever listened to a speech of his in the House without learning something from it."

Those are my sentiments, too, about the former minister of agriculture in the Diefenbaker government. Alvin isn't and hasn't been in vogue, with the Tories or the political press, but he continues to show two attributes which are too rare among our politicians — firstly, a sense of the past with a feel for emerging trends; secondly, a perpetual innocent's willingness to imagine that anybody, anywhere, may have a good idea, even a political opponent.

In the speech which Stu Leggatt and I liked, Alvin reviewed the modern story of transportation policy in Canada leading up to Otto Lang's current proposals.

"This bill", said Alvin, "moves all powers of transportation, representing about 40 per cent of the economic segment, over to the minister . . . it says we made a mistake in putting it into a neutral, independent board . . . This bill is transferring power from an independent forum — to the minister and the cabinet. There is no mechanism here for control by Parliament. We are simply going back to square one."

In conversation later with Alvin about his remarks, he drew my attention to a trend or pattern. He thought it ironic simply because there is currently such a massive national doubt, even scorn, for the federal bureaucracy, particularly among businessmen and trade union leaders.

Look at what's happening or has happened to a few important, "arm's length" agencies created in the 1960s. The National Energy Board is basically a regulatory agency now — it s advisory and policy-setting functions effectively withdrawn into the ministry of energy, etc. The new Communications Bill, which Sauve is sponsoring, is taking the range in policy and independence away from the CRTC. Lang is going to leave the Canadian Transportation Commission as merely a very limited regulatory agency.

It's not clear what the government will do with the Economic Council but obviously the vision of its outset as a bold, independent, ranging leader in developing economic policy discussion and alternatives is going to be clipped by the government.

Alvin went on to other details about the odd behavior of the Metric Commission and the reduction and narrowing of the authority and initiatives of the Canada Council. His gist was simple enough. At a time when there are grave doubts, admitted by the government as a result of the auditor general's views, about the competence of the federal bureaucracy and the failures of both parliamentary and ministerial control and scrutiny of the federal leviathan several major legislative initiatives will take away independence and power from some important agencies and vest it in the "governor-in-council."

"We know," said Alvin, "that 'governor-in-council' is an archaic euphemism for 'the cabinet.' Superficially, this pattern can be argued as more democratic. It's merely returning the power to where teh responsibility is.

"But it isn't really this," argued Alvin, "because the massive swing to bureaucratic rationalization, so much a fetish of Trudeau right from his advent in 1968, has made the synonym for governor-in-council the senior bureaucracy, not the cabinet."

Alvin's argument was along my own lines, even to the simple thesis that the current awareness that Parliament is largely irrelevant and redundant must look for an explanation to bureaucratic proliferation and genuine control of government by officials, not by politicians.

"The best evidence to sustain my arguments in all this," said Alvin, "came to my desk recently. Here it is. A paper written by a bureaucrat of bureaucrats, John R. Baldwin. You remember John R. Baldwin?"

I certainly did. A 64-year-old former Rhodes Scholar, a deputy minister of transport from 1955 to 1960 when he became president of Air Canada where he lost in a long power struggle to Yves Pratte, and retired in 1974 and came back to Ottawa where he has been "consultant" with the ministry of transport for a tidy fee. Baldwin combines the longest and highest-level stint as a federal bureaucrat in transportation.

The paper is titled "The Evolution of Transportation Policy in Canada" and was given to a seminar of the CTC a few months ago. It is a rather turgid 15,000 word essay, turgid because of a heavy freight of transportation vocabulary, not because of confusion in argument. Later I want to detail Baldwin's alarm, his bureaucrat's fear of bureaucrats. As Alvin said, "read just that one sentence — that's almost unbelievable, coming from one of them."

The sentence refers to proposals to "reserve a discretionary authority for the governor-in-council"

"This," said Baldwin, "is a tremendous amount of power to place in the hands of the bureaucracy." Indeed.

A Terrifying Perspective

By PAUL GOLDBERGER

SEATTLE — Frank Lloyd Wright used to talk about the need to "destroy the box," and by now, so many architects have come to agree that it is difficult to find a new skyscraper that does not have some sort of eccentric form to it. Pennzoil Place in Houston is a pair of trapezoidal towers. Transamerica in San Francisco is a pyramid, and John Hancock in Boston is a parallelogram. Now unorthodox shape has come to Seattle in the form of Rainier Square, 40-storey skyscraper that has people in this city not just talking, but looking up nervously as they pass near it. This building's eccentricity is all at the bottom; the 140-foot-wide tower is balanced on an 11-storey concrete base that narrows to just 68 feet wide at street level, making the entire building look as if it is about to tip over.

At ground level there is a plaza, and from there the concrete pedestal widens in an upward and outward slope from its tony square base to the much larger tower, like a giant inflatable form that has just blown out from beneath the earth's surface.

The architect was Minoru Yamasaki, who ironically gave New York the biggest boxes of all in the World Trade Center, and it is difficult to know quite what he was doing here. The shape of the Rainier Square base is not visually pleasing or even amusing; it is in fact rather terrifying, since it is hard not to feel a considerable nervousness at the sight of a 40-storey skyscraper looming overhead on a concrete pedestal that touches the ground only in the centre.

One of the local newspapers here ran an article explaining the engineering principles to assure worried Seattlites that the building would not topple over on passers-by.

But the article missed the point. No one really thinks that the building will fall over, the much deeper problem of this building is that it suggests there are certain forms against which we react almost instinctively and by which we are made to feel uneasy. If this is so, a natural question presents itself; why do architects like Yamasaki feel so free to use them? This building looks upside down, and all the technological savvy in the world will not make it look right side up. We may know that the building will not fall down, but that knowledge is not ehough to make walking past it comfortable.

The tower's builder, Unico Properties Inc., talks in descriptive brochures about Rainier Square's base as "a place that welcomes people," and observes that Yamasaki has "Opened up an entire city block" to make "space to breathe to circulate, to explore." Freeing ground space, therefore, is the rationale of the tower that balances like a dancer on her toes, but the utterly disturbing quality the building's shape has as it hovers over its newly opened city block renders that argument absurd.

It is not a place that feels relaxing, and while only time is the final judge in such matters, it does not seem likely that it will become any more comfortable in the future; what is wrong with this building is not a mere quirk but the genuinely threatening face it presents to the city.

This is what differentiates Rainier Square — which, incidentally, is the new headquarters for Seattle's Rainier National Bank — from other flamboyant buildings like Transamerica in San Francisco. The much-mocked Transamerica pyramid is admittedly a bit silly, but it is altogether benign, and its effect on San Francisco's cityscape is in fact quite healthy: It is the only new building that brightens that city's now dreary skyline.

Similarly, Pennzoil Place in Houston, where twin towers of trapezoidal shape have their tops sliced off at a 45-degree angle, makes an effort to enliven the skyline, while at street level it relates carefully to what surrounds it. The best of the new generation of oddly shaped skyscrapers save their fun and games for the top where flamboyance is logical, and they present a more sober and responsible face to the city at street level.

In this sense they recall the best of the skyscrapers of the 1920s and early 1930s, like the Empire State Building, which brings drama to the cityscape in its famous profile, but which is integrated carefully into the scale and surroundings of Fifth Avenue and 34th Street at ground level.

But Rainier Square does precisely the opposite. Its tower is mediocre, dulling an already dull skyline, and where the building should have calmed down, at the bottom, it suddenly went wild, breaking the line of connection with neighboring buildings and creating that looming, threatening shape. It is a self-aggrandizing narcissistic flamboyance, not an entertaining one, and it is ironic indeed that the whole thing should be presented in the rhetoric of "planning for people."

Fish Crisis Looms in Japan

By MARK MURRAY

TOKYO — The move by the United States, Canada, Mexico and the Soviet Union to establish 200-mile fishing zones off their shores is a stunning blow to the Japanese fishing industry, which previously took almost half its total catch from the disputed waters of other nations.

The Japanese fleets will probably end up with permission to fish once again, but their catches will inevitably be tightly restricted, although no one as yet knows by how much.

The Japanese are being encouraged to accept mackerel and sardine, which are to be found in large quantities off the Japanese coast but are normally used as animal food.

The Japanese government is now campaigning to boost the image of these more humble fish, and the TV cooking shows demonstrate how they can be prepared to best advantage by the housewife.

But if the Japanese cannot change their fish-eating habits, and all the signs are they will not, the country could become increasingly dependent on foreign food supplies, just as it is on raw materials for industry.

In many key commodities (wheat, soybeans, sugar) imports already account for from 80 to 96 per cent of Japan's needs.

Nature and geography denied the Japanese virtually all the basic raw materials, and fish is no exception. The despised sardine and mackerel are available in coastal waters, but the prized pollack, flatfish, salmon, trout, bonito, tuna and yellow tail have all had to be brought back from farflung foreign fishing grounds. Some 4.5 million tons of fish a year were accounted for in these massive operations.

Fishery products still account for 50.7 per cent of Japan's annual protein consumption even though there has been a gradual decline under the influence of a heavier meat and dairy diet in the past 10 years.

But despite the outcry over the dire effects on the country's food problems created by the 200-mile fishery zones, the general public has yet to experience any sense of crisis — hence the government's campaign.

However, there is definitely serious concern among fishermen and workers in related food industries, thousands of whom face the loss of their jobs.

Their is already a precedent for this in the whaling industry following the much reduced catches imposed over the past few years to preserve endangered species.

Pending the allocation of quotas to fish in the exclusive zones, Japanese companies do not know hou much of an operational cutback will become necessary, nor how many of the nation's 40,000 deep sea fishermen will be unemployed.

Various unions have already banded together in an increasingly vocal campaign to demand strong government action to safeguard their livelihood. They claim that government neglect of the fishing industry has led to the present difficulties.

★ ★ ★

There is a clear prospect of food becoming more expensive and in shorter supply.

What some Japanese commentators now fear is that a panic like the one that followed the 1973 Arab oil embargo (typified by a rush to hoard toilet paper, for example) might be the end result.

As one observed recently, "It would be nightmarish for a country of 110 million people without any resources worthy of mention to find both its oil and food supply lines under foreign control."

Rocky TV Marriages Rescued

russell baker

As a student of happiness in television news marriages, I am distressed by rumors that the match between Harry Reasoner and Barbara Walters is not working out and may soon be on the rocks. Neither Harry nor Barbara has yet come in for a consultation, unfortunately, for I believe that proper counselling can still save their relationship and assure them of a long, happy and meaningful life of reading the news together.

Similar signs of misunderstanding occurred early in the match between John Chancellor and David Brinkley, but both Chancellor and Brinkley were mature enough to concede their relationship was headed for trouble unless they sought counselling. Their problem was quickly identified and eliminated after a series of interviews.

Chancellor confessed that he could not stand Brinkley's habit of removing his shoes and socks just before the NBC Nightly News went on the air and doing the show barefoot, which he regarded as an undignified approach to the news. Brinkley knew that his was an irritating habit, but explained that he had fallen into it early in his career, had always gone on barefoot, was hopelessly addicted to the habit and feared that if forced to do the show wearing shoes and socks he might become speechless with terror in front of the camera.

After frank discussions, Chancellor agreed to try overcoming his puritanical sense of propriety and do the show one evening with his own feet bared. To his delight, he found the experience gave him a sense of well-being and enriched fulfillment. Now both Chancellor and Brinkley do the show barefoot every night. The knowledge of sharing a secret has created a bond between them, which is warmly expressed in the enigmatic smiles they exchange from time to time during the show's progress.

It was not so easy solving Walter Cronkite's problem, which he brought me early in his career.

At that time, Walter was testing a variety of news mates in hope of making a lasting match. A dozen partners were tested in preparation for launching CBS's evening news show. Among them were Zasu Pitts, Marjorie Main, Bonita Granville and Douglas Dumbrille. Walter got along splendidly with all of them until the show began and they got down to business. Then, Walter would invariably tell them it was time for them to go home and let him work.

Walter was in despair when he finally conceded that he needed counselling, but he took it without flinching. "You haven't faced the truth about yourself, Walter," I told him. "The truth is that you're an uncle figure. You love having kids around to play with, but when you get down to the real business of life you don't want to shoulder responsibility for them."

In accepting this advice, Walter built the only bachelor American news show on television today. Despite his success, he seems unresigned to loneliness. Not long ago, I read in one of the gossip columns that he had told somebody at a party he was tired of being "Uncle Walter" and yearned to be a sex symbol.

Obviously, he will soon need more counselling. Those local news shows are filled with sex symbols, usually four or five of them, who take turns demonstrating how much they all like each other. This is the new multiple-mating trend in TV news and, as in group sex, on which it seems to be modeled, it leads to almost unbearable tensions among the principals.

★ ★ ★

As for Barbara and Harry, their refusal to come forth and ask for counselling makes it difficult to explain their unhappiness. We know, of course, that Barbara has the money, and it may be that Harry, a model of virility if there ever was one, resents having to ask her for $10 every time he wants to go bowling with the camera crew.

Barbara, being a person, must naturally resent Harry's old-fashioned notion that it is demeaning for a man to have to ask a person for his bowling money.

This, of course, is only conjecture. The real nub of the problem may be something as simple as Harry's irritation with Barbara's constant failure to put the cap back on the makeup jar. Only experienced news counselling can uncover the source of tension, and why Harry and Barbara don't undertake it is a mystery. Americans can forget any quantity of unhappy news, but only if it comes from happy people.

Dear Advertiser:

Sometimes you use humour in your advertisements. You do it because often a light touch can be the very attention-getting device you need to show your product or service to best advantage.

The news we publish often has its light side too; funny things that happen to people in their everyday lives, odd turns-of-event that bring the human touch to the business of living by making us laugh.

But when it comes to our circulation figures, we're very serious. Any publication can claim circulation but some have to prove it.

The Daily Colonist and Victoria Times fall in the latter category.

We are members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations and as members have to submit to an annual audit to prove that we did in fact sell every paper we claim.

Therefore, when the Colonist and the Times claim that between them they have an average daily circulation of over 70,000 that means over 70,000 copies were paid for and delivered to the homes of subscribers or were purchased by readers from news boys or girls or from newsstands. We have to prove that to an international auditor.

We can't claim as paid circulation any papers that are distributed and not sold.

So, when anyone in our advertising sales department claims that we have a circulation of over 70,000 daily that means that 70,000 people paid hard cash to read the Colonist or the Times.

If you are an advertiser, that's important because you know your ad really is getting to someone who wants to read a newspaper.

Sincerely,

H. L. Alexander,
Advertising Director.

Nanaimo Approves Mains

NANAIMO (CP) — Nanaimo residents on the weekend passed controversial water and sewer bylaws that will cost them more than $15 million.

A turnout of 31 per cent of the 21,000 eligible voters passed the sewer bylaw 4,027 to 2,963 and the water vote carried 4,019 to 2,973. A simple majority meant approval.

The vote was forced by the Concerned Citizens Committee headed by Pat Barron who run unsuccessfully for mayor last November.

Barron said people not directly benefitting from the services to newly-developed parts of the recently-amalgamated city shouldn't have to pay for them.

Mayor Frank Ney called the result a victory for amalgamation as well as for the future of Nanaimo.

Asked whether the result was a repudiation of Barron and his group, the mayor said: "Democracy works well. People have more intelligence and common sense than some people give them credit for."

Ney said the only unfortunate thing about the vote is the delay will mean an extra cost of about $300,000 because of inflation.

The city's position was that spreading the cost of the projects among all taxpayers was the fairest method.

Ney is president of the city's largest development and real estate company which Barron said stood to gain most by passage of the two bylaws.

A conflict-of-interest charge levelled by Barron against Ney resulted in a municipal affairs ministry investigation that is still continuing.

Ney said the new lines to sparsely-developed areas such as Northfield and East Wellington are part of an over-all plan which will link with lines to other areas to upgrade the total city system.

Norfolk House To Expand

Norfolk House School has launched a drive to raise $300,000 to fund the construction of a new office, library, art room, two laboratories and classrooms.

The expansion of facilities will cost $450,000, but increased enrolment is expected to provide $100,000 of that and $50,000 has been received from donations and capital funds on hand.

The fund raising campaign is to feature a school garden and garage sale on April 16, a buffet-dance at the University of Victoria on April 29, a Norfolk House auction and a lecture by author Miles Smeaton.

No dates have been set for the latter two events as yet.

Those wishing to make donations, or seking further information on the fund-raising campaign, should contact the school at 598-2621.

NANAIMO TEACHER EYES TOMMY DOUGLAS'S SEAT

NANAIMO — Ted Miller, a high school teacher here, will seek the New Democratic Party nomination in the next federal election replacing incumbent Tommy Douglas.

Miller, 35, stepped down as president of the area riding association on the weekend and was replaced by Bill Duncan. Other officers are Dale Lovick, first vice-president; Paulette Van Riper, second vice-president; Betty Kennedy, secretary; Marguerite Robinson, treasurer; Brita Nickull, organizer, and Bert Rougeau, provincial council delegate.

Biologist Owen Kennedy, director for Cedar on the Nanaimo Regional Board, also is expected to seek the NDP nomination although he is not allowed to actively campaign because he is a civil servant.

Nanaimo-Alberni is a new riding and Alberni MP Hugh Anderson already has been nominated by the Liberals.

Private Teachers Seeking Union

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teachers in British Columbia's independent schools have decided to form a professional organization to give them a voice in dealings with government.

Delegates at the Federation of Independent School Associations' (FISA) convention, passed a resolution calling for greater strength among independent school teachers.

At present, independent school teachers are not members of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, which represents public school teachers in salary-bargaining and dealings with local school boards and the provincial government.

Private school teachers deal with a board of trustees responsible for each of the approximately 150 independent schools in B.C.

Some delegates expressed fear that private school teachers might organize into a group similar to the BCTF or a union, and that a feeling of adversity could develop between teachers and trustees.

"I very much oppose an adversary system between teachers and trustees," said Gerry Ensing, executive director of FISA. "We need the two groups to respect each other and we don't need a union activity."

Ensing, a former teacher, said he does believe independent teachers should organize to represent themselves.

"Independent teachers should work to consider their own interests, and it's a matter of bringing the (independent school) community together to allow teachers to cooperate in the area of their own competence," he said. "They could also come together to work on solutions to common, existing problems."

Chilliwack teacher Pauline Van Biert said the individual independent school boards, many of which are divisions of the National Union of Christian Schools, have their own contracts with the teachers of their schools.

"Salaries vary from school to school, but in the past five years, we have been trying to come up to the standards of the public schools,' she said. "But because of the funding differences between public schools and us, we can't always come up with the money to pay teachers the same amount.

She said independent teachers feel they definitely need a voice to face the government on issues dealing with children's needs.

The B.C. government this week introduced legislation that makes provision for funding of independent schools.

Lack of Farm Labor Startling, Says MP

RICHMOND (CP) — It is startling that in a time of high unemployment, eastern Canada must import workers and B.C. farmers have trouble finding help, says Hugh Anderson, Liberal Member of Parliament for Comox-Alberni.

Anderson was commenting on two briefs presented to the federal Liberal caucus of British Columbia, which met here Sunday.

Patrick Johnston of the Richmond Youth Services Agency, who presented a grim picture of youthful unemployment problems, was followed by the British Columbia Federation of Labor, which complained about having to compete with cheap Mexican farm labor used on United States operations.

"It is a bit difficult to get people who will do that kind of work," said federation representative Robert Reynolds.

"The attitude to work isn't the same," he told the caucus. "Young persons' expectations are raised beyond what we ask them to do."

Anderson complained that the average 17-to-25-year-old worker employed at the Tahsis mill in his riding stays only two months, despite a minimum wage of $7.10 at the mill.

Mark Raines (Burnaby Seymour) suggested that B.C. farmers had trouble employing workers because conditions in the field were very poor.

He told the federation delegation that he hadn't looked into the situation for several years but at one time there were no water or toilet facilities in the fields and workers were expected to work long hours for very low wages.

Reynolds assured him that conditions have improved.

Trident Protest Site Eyed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A pacifist group trying to halt construction of the Trident nuclear submarine base in Bangor, Wash., is looking for a house nearby to rent for a summer of civil disobedience.

Jim Douglass of the Pacific Life Community said Sunday a house in Kitsap county will be used as t training centre for people wanting to disrupt the base's operation.

"About 12 people have already committed themselves for the summer as a core group of trainers," Douglass said.

Participants will be housed in tents, he said, and the first action is planned for July 4.

"In a brainstorming session, the group will select an action to engage in, like blocking access to the base," Douglass said.

The Bangor base, scheduled for completion in 1983, is to be the home port for about 30 of the United States' nuclear submarines. It is located 100 miles south of Vancouver on the Hood Canal.

Gaglardi Offers to Solve Unemployment

Gaglardi . . . all he wants is an airplane

VANCOUVER (CP) — Flying Phil Gaglardi, the pint-sized Pentecostal preacher who blacktopped British Columbia when he was its highways minister, has found a new mission in life.

He has offered, free of charge, to singlehandedly solve the two major problems confronting Canada today — national unity and unemployment — devoting a year to each task.

"Give me an airplane so I could travel across the country the way I want to travel and believe me, I could accomplish it," he said in a recent interview.

It has been five years since Gaglardi, 64, was turfed out of office along with the rest of W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit Government.

And during that time, Gaglardi found himself in hot water for laying rubber (seven driving offenees) on the highways and misuse of government aircraft.

Today, he figures he's ready for a comeback. He feels he has the ideas but nobody to bounce them off.

"From that standpoint, leaving politics was a bad thing," he said in an interview in the Vancouver offices of his two entrepreneur sons. "Certainly I've lost a lot of audience by not being in the political arena.

"I think maybe I missed the boat. There were things I should have participated in or run for, but didn't. The federal political scene would be one of them.

"The one great ambition and drive of my life today is to obtain a national and international weekly television show, a quasi-religious broadcast in whch I can speak to labor, management, government, scientists and to the ordinary people.

"I want to make the nation recognize that God is always a forgotten force in every area of social activity, including the governmental process.

"The world is screaming, groaning, travailing for someone who has a powerful voice of decisiveness of authority that will give direction to a world that is stumbling around in quagmire."

Is the five-foot, ½-inch leather-lunged Gaglardi that somebody?

He says he has "people at work right now" attempting to set up the national TV show, "but as always there are many things to be considered, including finances."

What has Gaglardi been doing since his election defeat in the Kamloops riding where he was considered a shoo-in in 1972?

"Working. I've got a dynamo way down deep inside me that just won't let me quit. I haven't had a vacation in 30 years and I'm not going to start taking them now."

So now he's helping his sons with their chain of motels between here and Edmonton. He said his income consists of $11,000 annual pension as a former B.C. cabinet minister and expense money from his sons.

He has "about $2,000 in a couple of bank accounts" and his Kamloops home and ranch as assets.

Gaglardi resigned his highways portfolio after opposition parties were tipped he had arranged for his daughter-in-law and grandson to be flown to Dallas, Texas, aboard a government Lear jet.

But after the 1969 election, he bounced back as welfare minister — a portfolio he renamed rehabilitation and social improvement —and launched his own job-finding program to get the deadbeats off welfare.

Under his department's Provincial Alliance of Businessmen (PAB) he said he found 30,000 jobs for "unemployed employables" on welfare who were capable of working.

But on Aug. 30, 1972, he was one of 12 Social Credit cabinet ministers to taste defeat.

Shortly after the election, Gaglardi applied for unemployment insurance but unemployment insurance commission officials told him that as a politician, he wasn't eligible for benefits.

He then tried a two-week stint as an open-line radio host in Kamloops but that didn't work out and he wound up working for his sons.

Gaglardi still thinks there's a role for him in Canadian public life and he's serious when he says he could solve unemployment and national unity.

"I could change the face of Canada on an unemployment-employment basis within one year's time if I was given a free hand to do so. Very, very simply, I would use the PAB system I worked out in B.C. on a national basis.

"I challenge this nation to give me the opportunity. I'll do it. If I can't do it, I'll go to my grave as a laughingstock.

"I'd be the proudest fellow in the world if this nation would commission me to straighten out the lack of unity in Canada.

Major Firms Get Warning

VANCOUVER (CP) — Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Tony Abbott says the federal government's proposed new Competition Act will not necessarily brand corporations as anti-competitive and monopolistic just because they are major operators in the market place.

"We don't say: Okay — you're an oligopoly and therefore, you're bad; We say: You're an oligopoly but if you act in a way that's deliberately detrimental or deliberately keeping out competition beyond just being efficient and being popular with your customers — then under the new Competition Act we'd look at the situation," said Abbott.

Maj. Dick Hampton, with scope, watches shooting as 3rd Battalion, PPCLI, assists

JOERISSEN

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Happiness is lying on your tummy with your sights on Bisley.

Never mind that the ground is hard and that the wind is chill as it knifes across Heal's Range.

For 18 of the 19 youngsters bellied down and cradling brand-new Australian target rifles in their arms, participation in the Bisley matches in Britain in July is a certainty.

One will stay home.

The group of 18 boys and one girl from army cadet corps across Canada spent the week at Heal's training under their coach, Maj. Dick Hampton, of Woodlawn, Ont.

They took part in a Dominion Rifle Association match against cadets of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Small arms instructor Sgt. Jim King, of PPCLI 3rd Battalion, was asked if the Bisley-bound cadets are good compared with the regular forces.

"Yes," he declared, pointing to the nearest marksman, 18-year-old Charles Jackson of Victoria, who was firing his last shots of the day.

"He's working on a possible (perfect score)."

Jackson, a member of the PPCLI cadet team, was teamed with fellow cadet Ian Whitehead, 17, and they shot 101 and 104, respectively, out of a possible 105.

The lowest score of 10 practising that afternoon was 95.

"It makes my job nasty," Hampton commented, thinking of the one who will be dropped.

She belongs to 2370 RCAC (10th Field Artillery).

"There's never been a girl on the team and I'd like to be the first."

How's her shooting?

The cadets are from six provinces. Four each from B.C., Saskatchewan and Quebec, three from Ontario and two each from Alberta and Nova Scotia.

Most have been shooting two years or less.

In full bore competition, everyone uses the same ammunition, .308 or 7.62 mm, and the Canadian team rifle is the Sportco, specially designed for target shooting.

Each is worth about $300 with sights.

Heading the team is Lieut.-Col. Vince Lilley, of Vernon, who said the shooters found their first use of Heal's range to be wholly satisfactory after being accustmed to indoor winter practice.

He expects to bring next year's team here also.

UVic Study May Boost Asia Diet

Two University of Victoria scientists and a Duncan farmer have teamed together in an intensive two-year research program that could significantly affect the diets of people in Malaysia, China and India.

UVic doctors Trevor Trust and Tom Buckley are sharing a $94,000 grant from the International Development Research Centre, a federal Crown corporation, to study ways of making carp grow more quickly. Acting as a consultant is Duncan farmer and biochemist, Dr. T. D. Groves.

Buckley said today although carp are an important source of protein in Malaysia and other countries, they are not raised scientifically as are salmon in B.C.

Buckley said that whatever feeds the researchers come up with will have to be not only effective but cheap as well, because Malaysian farmers are now getting results by feeding their carp grass.

"The diets used to feed salmon here would be extremely expensive in Malaysia," he said. "Obviously we can't give them ground hamburger or something like that."

Buckley said a similar study is now under way in Malaysia, but the UVic research is expected to provide the fine details.

He said the university received the research grant because it has a combined department of microbiology and biochemistry "and this gives us an unusual advantage." Both a micro-biologist and a biochemist are needed in the study.

Buckley said biochemistry will reveal how the carp grows while microbiology will determine the role of micro-organisms within the fish.

Carp are strictly vegetarian and can grow to weights of up to 40 pounds under good conditions.

The UVic researchers are working with an initial study group of 100 carp that are the size of goldfish.

Carp are not usually eaten in Canada but are considered a delicacy in Malaysia and other countries.

Buckley said that while the research may have no application in Canada at present, the time may come when carp are raised commercially here.

"They probably would be a fairly inexpensive source of food," he said. "I think that Canadians are going to eat more fish in the future but it's going to take some time."

Buckley added that the project is expected to provide comparative data for the study of other fish species, such as salmon.

PARTIAL ECLIPSE of the moon was captured at 8:46 p.m. in this shot by the University of Victoria's observatory on Sunday. Occurring two or three times a year, a partial eclipse of the moon is rarely discernible in Victoria. Sunday's eclipse lasted from 7:30 to 9:06 p.m.

ARSON CHARGES LAID

The pair and two companions also face a number of breaking and entering counts.

The two youths to be charged in connection with the blaze at British Upholstery Ltd., 546 Herald, are both 16. One of their companions, who faces five breaking and entering charges, is 12.

Police and fire officials, meanwhile, are still investigating four other arson fires which occurred early Saturday morning in the James Bay district.

And Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons revealed today several more deliberately-set fires — none serious — took place Sunday afternoon and evening.

Shortly before 12:30 a.m., firemen responded to a car fire at the Eagles Hall at 90 Dock. As they fought that fire, a second call came for a fire at a tool shed at 77 Dock.

A fiberglass boat valued at $5,000 was destroyed in that fire, and then a car parked behind the same apartment burst into flames.

TEA HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Cause of the blaze which broke out at about 9:30 p.m. is unknown. The small tea house had not been used for some time.

Navy League to Fight For True Blue Cadets

The Navy League of Canada will appeal to the federal government's defence committee in its fight to prevent Royal Canadian Sea Cadets being put in the controversial green safari uniform.

The national council of the league, meeting in Moncton, N.B. on the weekend, unanimously voted to have representatives appear before the committee.

National president Bob Hendy of Toronto reiterated that, in a survey, thousands of cadets had written, stating they want to retain the blue seaman uniform they now wear.

Some had made it clear they will leave the organization if the green safari uniform is forced on them.

Vancouver Island personnel attending the meeting were Jack Koyl, immediate past national president; Gerry Bishop and Pat Dufour, board of management members, all of Victoria, and Harry Waring of Duncan, president of the league's Vancouver Island division.

Tom Hallett of St. John's Nfld., chairman of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet committee, said the switch in uniforms will destroy morale, both in cadet corps and the adult volunteers in the league who support the movement.

The safari uniforms are already being issued to army and air force cadets.

Brig.-Gen. R. G. Therriault of Ottawa assured the league sea cadets will not be issued the green uniforms until the army and air force cadets had all received the new issue.

He agreed the present uniforms, if the league is unsuccessful in its fight to keep them, could be used for special occasions by bands, honor guards and color parties.

If the sea cadets are forced into the green uniforms the league will insist that distinctive features such as the seaman's cap, gunshirt and white belt be retained.

DONATIONS MAY TOP $32,000

Firefighters over the weekend turned their energies in a different direction and came up with a record-breaking amount in their muscular dystrophy campaign.

Campaign vice-chairman Fred Metters of the Victoria department said the total should exceed $32,000.

Donations are being counted with returns still trickling in so the exact figure won't be known for a day or two, he said.

"The drive was quite rewarding. We got a lot more than we thought we would," Metters said.

28 New Jobs Created

The federal Canada Works program has created 28 jobs in Esquimalt-Saanich with a grant of $163,370, including $41,580 to expand the Sidney Silver Threads Activity Centre.

Eight people will be hired to expand the centre on Resthaven Drive.

A grant of $25,578 will hire five people to renovate and repair the Sanscha Community Hall.

The Peninsula Community Association will receive $45,864 to hire five counsellors to work with teen-agers in the Brentwood Bay and Cadboro Bay areas.

University of Victoria will get $8,484 to hire five people to clear and develop walking paths and to clear the forest area for recreation use.

The Tsscycum Indian band will receive $34,864 to hire five people to repair existing housing, build two new homes and repair drainage systems on the reserve.

Earlier, 41 jobs were created through a grant of $288,000 to the Victoria-Oak Bay region.

A grant of $282,414 will create 48 jobs in the federal constituency of Nanaimo-Cowichan.

But Why Did They Murder Mister Spock?

TELEVISION, A MEDIUM which we allowed into our house only with grave misgivings, has grown on us through the years. I don't mean that we sit gazing at TV's window on the world for all of each and every evening. But there are shows we like, and to miss one of them can be a minor tragedy.

We're still wondering how the crew of the Starship Enterprise saved its inter-planetary vessel from an awesome space monster that looked rather like a stretched-out bullfrog with a warty hide and a mouthful of fangs. I spurred our car along 100 miles of highway in hopes of catching that show, but too fast wasn't fast enough.

All we salvaged was an exploded view of the monster and a going-away glimpse of First Officer Spock's pointy Vulcan ears.

Star Trek is lost to us, and more's the pity. They aren't making it any more, and since Channel II isn't in our cablevision package, we can't even watch the repeats. When nights are long and entertainment spotty, we miss Mr. Spock and his space-probing colleagues in their ducky uniforms.

For better or worse, television characters become friends. And when a tried and tested friend of long association is snatched away untimely, it hurts.

Take John-Boy in that marathon idyll, The Waltons. We watched John-Boy grow up. We were with him in spirit when he went off to college, and launched a rural newspaper, and toiled by a late-burning light on a novel that took the devil's own time to get itself finished.

Now his masters have snatched him off to New York after some mighty permanent-sounding goodbyes to his family, and I suspect that a lot of water will flow down good old Rockfish Creek before we see him again.

This, in fact, has become a season of television partings. We could spare John-Boy, though, regretfully, but how are we going to manage without Mary Tyler Moore?

The show of that name was one of our enduring favorites. We looked forward to it. We liked its people — newsroom chief Lou, Murray the newswriter, Mary herself, even that egomaniac anchorman, Ted Baxter.

They lived. They moved. They endeared themselves. And now they are gone, their show vanished into the limbo that waits for a series deemed by the high priests of the studios to have run its course even though its ratings remain high.

Why do they do it to us? Why did they marry off Nurse "Hot-Lips" Houlihan of M-A-S-H, a hard-nosed lady of illusion whose semi-single state lent pizazz to a series that has brightened many an otherwise barren TV evening?

I don't know, but I hope the mysterious "they" who rule on these matters will stay their hands while we've still got something worth watching.

We resent that sort of thing. We want our shows to last!

I have yet to touch on the most grievous cut of all. No more Upstairs, Downstairs. The final instalment of the mannered English series has been screened, and I doubt we will see its like again.

We didn't merely follow that absorbing television tale with its shuttlings between servants' hall and masters' drawing-room in an England of which only vestigial traces remain. We were drawn into it by clever scripting and polished acting to the point where I felt a sympathetic pang in my own gizzard when Hudson the butler crumpled from a heart attack.

A show capable of doing that to a viewer deserves to last. But Upstairs, Downstairs, has shared the common fate, and our Thursday evenings have been robbed of a valued dimension.

There are minor compensasations. All in the Family goes on, with Archie Bunker still the bigot's bigot. They haven't got around to murdering that one yet!

As for the others, television procedures guarantee that we can count on repeats and repeats far into the future.

U.S. Oil Companies Protest Ban on Gasoline Additive MMT

WASHINGTON (WP) — A key U.S. senate subcommittee has voted to amend the Clean Air Act in a way the nation's oil companies claim would trigger a shortage of gasoline by the summer of 1978.

The subcommittee on environmental pollution, chaired by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (Dem.-Main), has warned oil companies preparing to use a gasoline additive named MMT Not to do so and has warned oil companies already using it that they would have six months to remove it from their gasoline.

The reason Muskie's committee has moved against MMT is the growing evidence that its use fouls the catalytic converters installed in cars built in the last four model years to reduce engine exhausts, making them useless after as little as 15,000 miles of driving. Normally, converters are expected to last a minimum of 50,000 miles.

"Preliminary testing indicates that MMT causes an increase in engine deposits and an increase in engine-out hydrocarbon emissions," General Motors Corp. told the Muskie committee.

"Our tests also indicate MMT negatively influences durability and causes deterioration of four future emissions-control systems."

Almost unknown outside the automotive industry MMT is a managanese compound that has been put in gasoline in tiny traces, with tetraethyl lead for 20 years to boost octaine ratings.

It has what he called a "synergistic" effect on lead in gasoline, meaning its presence makes the lead raise octane ratings more than the lead did itself.

When lead was ordered phased out of gasoline, a few oil companies substituted MMT for lead in unleaded gasoline. They found that it boosted octane ratings the same way lead did, by stopping the reaction in the fuel that results in a portion of the fuel and air mixture going unburned during combustion.

No fewer than 50 U.S. refineries now add about 10 million pounds of MMT a year to about 40 per cent of the unleaded gasoline sold in the United States today.

Most are small refiners who use the MMT so they don't have to spend large sums of money to refit their refineries, but at least five big refiners use it too,

They are Exxon, Gulf, Standard Oil Co. of California, American Oil Co. and Atlantic Richfield.

Gulf has said it will have to run as much as 8 million barrels of additional oil a year through its refineries to make as much gasoline as it makes now using MMT to boost octanes for high-compression engines.

Either that, Gulf says, or it will lose as much as 3 million barrels of low-octane gasoline every year, because it won't burn right in today's cars.

Gulf says if every refiner now using MMT were forced to abandon its use, it would result in a loss of 60 million barrels of gasoline in one year. That's 2.5 billion gallons of gasoline, enough to trigger a nationwide shortage for the unleaded fuel that now makes up more than 20 per cent of U.S. supply.

The subcommittee does not accept the oil industry's arguments about MMT, claiming the additive costs more fuel by fouling spark plugs and exhaust-control devices.

Carter's Energy Program Means Higher U.S. Prices

WASHINGTON (WP) — Low-income groups in the U.S. will face higher prices as a result of President Carter's yet-to-be-announced energy conservation program, energy adviser James Schlesinger said Sunday.

But any price increases — possibly on gasoline and — for large cars — "will all be offset by lower prices or lower taxes elsewhere . . . not necessarily in the energy sector," Schlesinger said.

Schlesinger, appearing on the television show Issue and Answers said the administration could seek t reduction in payroll taxes — possibly those for Social Security — in an effort to counter-balance the effects of increased fuel or vehicle costs.

"We are considering a whole range of alternatives . . . in order to offset the penatly on lower-income groups in particular, because of the major adjustments in price relationships that must come over a period of years" in attempting to solve the nation's energy problems, Schlesinger said.

Carter plans to present his energy conservation program to congress by April 20 and Schlesinger said one of the main points of that program will be "to challenge the American people with regard to the very high use of gasoline."

A higher tax on large, fuel-wasteful cars is "certainly under consideration" by the administration, Schlesinger said. But he said the administration has made no final decision about a car tax, or about an increase in gasoline taxes.

"We will have to consider both of those kinds of techniques (taxes) in order to see which is the most effective package," he said.

Asked about criticism from General Motors officials who say higher car taxes would hurt the automobile industry, Schlesinger replied, "What's good for General Motors is still not necessarily what's good for the United States."

Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr., appearing on Face the Nation (CBS), said his party could support President Carter in imposing higher taxes on larger cars. But he said Republicans would oppose any move to increase gasoline taxes.

The Republicans plan to introduce an energy-conservation proposal of their own this month, Baker said.

He added: "There'll be no gas tax in the Republican package (because such a tax) would penalize about two-thirds of the people in the country who have to use their cars because they don't have the option of public transportation."

Instead, Baker said the Republicans are considering a proposal that would give "more petroleum products to transportation and essential services and less to the generation of electricity."

HOME SOLAR ENERGY MUCH CLOSER — EXPERT

WASHINGTON (WP) — Solar energy technology soon will be used widely in the home, and in industry and agriculture — sooner than most Americans suspect — according to one solar energy expert.

Solar energy use has lagged, Hayes says, because solar technology has not had the same tax incentives that oil and natural gas production have enjoyed over the years, including the depletion allowance and deductions for intangible drilling costs, or the federal funding devoted to nuclear power.

Hayes calls for a vigorous solar effort, citing evidence that the U.S. and every other country in the world could meet all of thir energy needs from the sunlight that strikes their buildings.

Hayes believes that the key to an aggressive solar program is "substantial governmnt intervention" such as a government mandate in energy-short northern Australia that all new buildings must use solar water heaters.

Tanker Friends, Foes Debate Spill Chances

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — While friends and foes of oil tankers debated the probability of oil spills in northern Puget Sound, a college professor told an oil spill seminar that little is known about the effects of spills on marine life.

Robert Lynette, a former president of the Coalition Against Oil Pollution, said the inevitability of an oil spill from increased tanker traffic in the northern sound is a mathematical certainty.

He spoke during a two-day conference: oil in Washington waters: boon or bane?

Lynette said large tankers are unsafe because they are hard to manoeuvre and take too long to stop.

He said that an average-size, 6,200-barrel oil spill could be expected every five to seven years in Washington waters, given the tanker traffic needed to supply the four oil refineries in Whatcom and Skagit counties.

If Cherry Point were used as a transhipment point to supply the Midwest with oil, he said the frequency of spills would rise to one every 1½ or two years.

Captain Richard Malm of the U.S. coast guard accused Lynette of "chicanery with figures." Malm said Lynette used world-wide data, extrapolated for Puget Sound, which is three years old.

Dr. Jerry Flora, a Western Washington State college professor, said knowledge is incomplete concerning the effects of an oil spill on marine life. He directs the college's Shannon Point marine laboratory.

He said studies of plant and animal species exposed to crude oil have shown a mortality rate ranging from 1 per cent to 89 per cent.

Flora said fish seem to be able to avoid the effects of a spill by leaving the area.

Ironically, oil cleanup efforts sometimes can be more damaging to living things than the oil itself, he said. Flora said very few birds are saved during mop-up operations.

John Weichert, manager of Clean Sound Oil Co-operative, said his organization is taking steps to prepare for spills. Clean Sound, formed by 14 companies in the oil industry, has cleanup equipment stored at Anacortes, Bellingham, Seattle and Tacoma.

"The state of the art is advancing rapidly," he said.

"We've made some progress. There are still things to be done."

★ CANADA BLAMED

BELLINGHAM (CP) — The director of the Washington State Ecology department says that Canada has created most of Washington's oil tanker problems by its elimination of oil exports.

Wilbur Hallauer told a conference on oil pollution at Washington State university that pollution from tanker traffic would be aggravated by increased imports of oil from overseas necessitated by Canada's move.

Hallauer said Canadians shut off the oil supply and then told Washington officials where Canada would prefer a new tanker port built in the state.

Wetter Summers Ahead: Scientists

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — Changing patterns of air circulation, solar radiation and glacier growth indicate dryer winters and wetter summers in the U.S. Northwest, two University of Idaho scientists say.

The prediction came from 30 years of observing glacier fields in southeastern Alaska and western British Columbia, said Dr. Maynard M. Miller, dean of the mining college, and Dr. Heinz Zslupetzky of the Institute of Glaciological and Arctic Sciences.

The great plains and Rocky Mountains may have wetter weather in the spring, but drought or near-drought will prevail in the West until the turn of the century, Miller predicted.

He said the weather in 1978 might go against the long range trend by being just about normal — cold and dry in the west and wet in the east.

Miller said his studies showed the sun exerts a powerful influence on weather.

"Sunspots in themselves are not the factor," he said recently. "It is changes in the frequency and intensity of solar flares and prominences that produce changes in the global atmospheric circulation."

Portland Blacks Out

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Oregon Governor Bob Straub is confident his request that lights be turned out in downtown Portland Monday night will be heeded, Straub's press aide said Sunday night.

The blackout is "to serve as an attention-getting device so people will understand that there is a serious energy crisis."

Makarios Stricken

NICOSIA (Reuter) — Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, suffered a mild heart attack Sunday, a government statement said Monday. The 63-year-old president is confined to his bed but is in good spirits and keeping in close touch with state affairs, the statement said.

No 'Beads, Trinkets,' Indians Told

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Indians should be wary of "beads-and-trinket" land settlements because "money is not nor ever was the issue," Bill Wilson told a United Native Nations land claims seminar Sunday.

Wilson, chairman of the Indian organization, told the weekend meeting that the James Bay settlement between natives and Hydro Quebec, which he said provides $4,000 a person payable over the next 20 years, is "precisely the type of settlement we have to avoid."

He said Indians must understand that monetary settlements are not the type of settlements that will benefit future generations, regardless of the unease caused by talking in terms of land and resource payments.

Wilson told the seminar that settlements have to come from politicians and through public opinion and the need for settlement of aboriginal land claims will intensify through events in the next year-and-a-half.

He said there was a possibility some major settlements will be made in the next five to 10 years and urged Indians in British Columbia to form tribal councils and loose groupings to bring their claims before the federal government.

Wilson described land claims by the Nishga people of northwestern B.C. as being at an advanced stage and said the differences among the 16 major groupings of B.C. Indians warrant that the Nishga proceed with their claims separately without delay.

He said that in the Nishga case, he disagreed with those who say the tribe should wait for inclusion in a master agreement for B.C. claims.

Death Knell For French?

MONTREAL (CP) — The Parti Quebecois government's white paper on language policy has sounded the death knell for the French language in Quebec, John Ciaccia, a Liberal member of the Quebec national assembly said Sunday.

Ciaccia said in an interview the policy paper "is a defensive document of a people with no confidence, trying to protect their society by keeping it controlled and closed."

But he claimed the plan would backfire. "I think the French language will disappear now through this document."

"A language can only flourish in a society with a vibrant, progressive economy," he contended.

Ciaccia, who represents the predominently English-speaking Montreal riding of Mou Royal, said the PQ is "the first government which inspires fear, not only to the English, but the French also."

"What we have here is almost intellectual terrorism," said Ciaccia, who was suspended from the Liberal caucus in 1974 for voting against the Official Language Act, commonly known as Bill 22.

He said he received only a few complaints from French constituents when Bill 22 was introduced, but since Friday — when the white paper was presented in the national assembly — "I've been getting it from everybody."

NO DROP SOON IN JOBLESS

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald says the federal government is unable to solve the unemployment problem right away.

"I would be as delighted as any finance minister would be to try and get the rate of unemployment down," he said on the CTV television network's Question Period program broadcast Sunday.

"But I don't think that we've got the tools of a significant magnitude at hand to be able to reduce unemployment drastically."

Opposition politicians have criticized Macdonald for failing to deal effectively with unemployment in his budget last Thursday. There were 932,000 Canadians out of work in February for a seasonally adjusted unemployment rate of 7.9 per cent.

Macdonald said his budget was not "primarily an employment-creation measure." Hopefully, tax concessions to business will help "indirectly in unemployment terms," he added.

The minister said although the government is aiming at an economic growth rate of four per cent this year, "one has to acknowledge that there are additional factors which could make that unattainable."

Answering questions, Macdonald said he has not decided whether to seek re-election, but "if I was choosing not to do so, I think it might be wise from the prime minister's standpoint to replace me in my position later this year."

Macdonald said in his budget speech that price-and-wage controls will remain in effect at least until Oct. 14, despite opposition demands that the controls be ended immediately.

But so far, the government has not had any firm commitment from business or labor to exercise voluntary restraints after the controls are lifted, he said.

Rotarians Hit Town April 15

Greater Victoria Rotary Clubs next month are sponsoring a conference that will attract about 1,200 Rotarians.

Members from 16 Vancouver Island and 29 Olympic Peninsula clubs will attend the conference at the Empress Hotel April 15-17.

Dr. Peter Banks, past president of the Canadian Medical Association, will be the keynote speaker at the opening ceremonies at Christ Church Cathedral.

Other speakers during the conference include Dr. Jaime Gomez, of Bogota, Columbia, and Hugh Wilkinson, a former headmaster of Shawnigan Lake Boys' School.

There will be student participation reflecting Rotary's international student exchange program.

Alta. Tory May Decide This Week to Join Grits

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau could learn this week if Alberta Tory Jack Horner is prepared to take up or reject an offer to join the federal Liberal party in parliament and enter the cabinet.

Horner has spent the past week at his ranch in Alberta. He has consulted friends and advisors. He was expected to return to Ottawa and meet this week with Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark.

Following that meeting Horner should be in a position to contact Jim Coutts, principal secretary to the prime minister, and advise him to inform Trudeau that either he has no intention of accepting the offer of a cabinet post, or inform him that he is ready to cross the floor.

The outspoken and top-rated member of the official opposition is annoyed that having agreed to travel across the country speaking for the Progressive Conservative party he now finds he is being challenged for the nomination in his own constituency by a relative newcomer to the Commons. While Horner has been busy keeping speaking engagements around Canada rookie MP Arnold Malone has been canvassing Horner's Crow Foot constituency ready to contest the next nomination meeting against Horner.

Malone has been quoted as saying that he could "beat out" Horner for the nomination in the new constituency of Crowfoot. Malone's own Battle River riding has been partly absorbed by the new Crowfoot constituency. He has been a member of the house since 1974 and when he found his riding was being absorbed into the Crowfoot constituency he began actively campaigning in the new seat that will come into existence June 11 under redistribution.

Horner feels that his party leader, Clark, has failed to keep an undertaking made to him when Horner was asked to travel across the country speaking for the party. Horner told newsmen he agreed last October to travel through Canada for the party if Clark and other Alberta MPs promised he would be allowed to run uncontested in the new constituency of Crowfoot.

The veteran front bench Tory parliamentarian, who has been reported to have been "sounded out" by the Grits as to whether he would cross the floor to take a post in the cabinet, feels aggrieved that Clark has not been able to make the agreement stick. Meanwhile, Malone has not improved matters by giving an interview in which he is quoted: "The problem of nomination isn't mine anymore, it's Jack's."

Malone appears determined that unless Clark can guarantee him the nomination in some other Alberta riding he will have to challenge Horner for the nomination in Crowfoot.

RIGHT TO KNOW

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial council of the British Columbia branch of the Canadian Bar Association has called for freedom of information legislation at both the federal and provincial levels.

The public's right to government information is fundamental, and without it, many other fundamental rights lose meaning, the council said.

In addition to access to government information, the council said the individual must have access to information pertaining specifically to him, and must be protected from the circulation of such confidential information.

The council said that concealing information can lead to abuse of power. It said a Freedom of Information Act would serve to strengthen democratic institutions.

Inuit Claiming Bias Over Phone Service

FORT CHIMO, Que. (CP) — The Inuit of northern Quebec say Bell Canada and the federal government are discriminating against them by providing better telephone service for their Inuit brothers in the Northwest Territories.

About 4,200 Inuit, one-quarter of the total Eskimo population in Canada, live in northern Quebec.

They live in 16 communities along about 1,000 miles of coastline of Ungava and Hudson Bay and communication is difficult, expensive and unreliable. Life often depends on being able to call in a plane for an emergency evacuation to hospital.

Five of the 16 communities have telephone service by Anik satellite, while there are 15 telephone-serviced communities in the Northwest Territories. Satellite service is being extended by Bell to eight others in the territories with the federal government picking up half the cost of $18 million.

Bell says it will add one more satellite ground station in northern Quebec by 1980, but that there is no money to extend it in the next few years.

The Inuit told a regional hearing of the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) here last week this is blatant discrimination.

Bell is seeking approval for rate increases that would benerate an additional $182 million in revenue. Company revenues totalled $1.9 billion last year.

The Inuit demanded that satellite service be extended to all northern Quebec settlements within two years.

Without the satellite service, all long-distance calls must be transmitted by high-frequency radio which is as unpredictable as the weather in this harsh eastern Arctic climate.

Delegates from settlements in the region gave almost 12 hours of testimony to the CRTC filled with descriptions of the hardships that resulted from poor communication.

They told of sometimes trying for days to call for emergency help from the regional hospital in this community, about 1,000 miles north of Quebec City, because of a sudden illness or serious injury.

One man said his daughter died because he was unable to call for an airplane to take her to hospital. Another told how Inuit in one community took turns trying to stop a person from losing blood from a serious leg gash for two days while others tried to call for help.

They also told of having to bring a pregnant woman with labor problems more than 100 miles by canoe because a plane could not be called.

There are no roads connecting the communities and although short distances can be travelled by snowmobile in winter or boat in summer, the plane or helicopter is the most used method of transport.

LANGUAGE TEST

SASKATOON (CP) — The senate of the University of Saskatchewan has approved a regulation requiring that prospective non-Canadian students pass an English-language proficiency test.

University president R. W. Begg said that the regulation will stand unless the university loses a battle with the Saskatchewan Human Rights Commission.

Faculty council and the senate last year passed and then rescinded a regulation requiring non-Canadian applicants whose first language was not English to score a minimum mark in a language test.

The human rights commission, acting on a complaint from five Chinese students, began an investigation into the policy as a possible violation of human rights. Hearings into the complaint have been postponed pending a university court challenge to the commission's jurisdiction.

Begg said most students would be able to meet the language requirement on the basis of high school education in Saskatchewan or "at an acceptable secondary institution."

Mountains Aren't Fair —Avalanche Survivor

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Ann Vogel, survivor of a Banff National Park avalanche that took the life of a companion and injured four other members of the 24-skier group, says, "I have no right to be alive."

People who ski in the park this year "should know they are tempting death and challenging the mountains," the Kamloops woman said in an interview. "The mountains aren't fighting fair."

Vogel said she was within touring distance of Shirley Oliver, 31, of Cranbrook, when an avalanche rushed down on them last week on the Citadel Pass area near Lake Louise. Oliver lost her life.

"We started in a snowstorm and visibility was very poor," said Vogel. "The trip was along gently rolling terrain." All the skiers except Vogel and the guide were equipped with narrow skis that sank in the soft snow.

"It was a very cumbersome, slow trip," remembers Vogel. Shirtly after lunch, the group entered a slide area and spaced themselves out as a safety precaution. The skiers were tense, remembers Vogel, because one man had been carried 100 feet by a small slide that morning.

Suddenly, she said, she saw a man ahead of her "tossed like driftwood. I really didn't know what hit him but saw him hit and tossed.

"It was like it all happened at once. I looked to my right and saw a wall of snow. The little girl in front of me was frantic and I tried to turn her. I tried to reach her and turn her downhill. I could have touched her hand. Our skis were touching."

Then the snow swept over her, said Vogel, burying her and seven other members of the party completely. Eleven other skiers were carried some distance but managed to stay on top of the snow.

"I heard the snow build up over me," said Vogel. "I got damned mad. I was upset because I hadn't bought any extra insurance. Next thing I thought was, "It's a helluva way to go."

"My right arm was pinned near my chest and I cleared a small area in front of my mouth. Then I put my hand over a necklace good luck-type whistle and went to sleep."

Forty minutes later, rescuers found her. Only three feet away was Oliver, who did not respond to mouth to mouth resuscitation or heart massage. Vogel herself was coughing blood as a result of ribs pressing on her lungs.

"A number of ribs were involved from the tonnage of snow that had fallen and just compressed my chest. They say that powder snow is light and that an avalanche carries oxygen, but this was like lead."

Vogel was quickly warmed up, evacuated Tuesday morning and discharged from Banff hospital after 24 hours of observation.

"We were told later that it was an extensive avalanche and that we were caught in the tail end of it, like in a curl," said Vogel.

"I heard a park warden say that if we had been caught a bit further along, it would have been a complete disaster."

Vogel said she had a premonition disaster would strike and settled details of her will before she left. She also arranged for two experienced guides to join her group.

Although two guides she consulted considered the trip safe, other mountain experts have told her "the mountains aren't forgiving this year."

"The conditions are so bad that no area can be considered totally safe."

Vogel said she considers her survival "a second chance for other people not to make the same mistake that I did.

"This year is a year of snow pack on the mountains. The fresh snow is heavy and warm. It almost feels like the mountains are moving, are out to get you.

"If anybody goes in, they should know they are tempting death."

BEWARE OF SLIDES . . . ANYWHERE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Experts are warning that skiers and others venturing into the back country and to remote runs anywhere in British Columbia's mountain regions should be prepared for the most treacherous snow conditions in years.

After a dismal lack of snow ealier this skiing season, late and relatively light snowfalls have caused unstable conditions extending from the Rockies to the coast, contributing to a death toll of 11 skiers in B.C. and Alberta.

Peter Schaerer, an avalanche research officer with the National Research Council based here, advises skiers to stick to the controlled areas, but if one insists on going further, he suggests that:

—A small radio-rescue beacon be carried in an inside pocket as close as possible to the head. If the beacon is on all the time, as it should be, other skiers in the party can adjust their devices to receive the beeps it transmits;

— Small shovel be carried because some avalanche victims have been found alive only to die while waiting to be dug out;

—Everyone should have a first aid kit and collapsible snow probes for finding victims.

Schaerer also said in an interview that all back-country venturers should realize that avalanches are caused by a combination of terrain, snow and wind conditions, and temperature — all of which should be constantly assessed. "The worst situation occurs when we get a heavy snowfall, strong winds and then high temperatures."

The expert adds that relatively small slides on short slopes can be lethal just like the more dramatic giant avalanches.

Some of the many signs to watch for are a steep slope and drifted snow or cornices on the downwind side. He says slopes facing north are usually on the downwind side and most likely to let go, but on a warm sunny day, south slopes also can be unstable.

Schaerer says skiers should be out of the back country by 11 a.m. to avoid the warm part of the day when slopes are most unstable. He also advised picking a route that minimizes danger, sticking to dense timber, ridge tops the windward side of ridges and flat areas far from steep slopes.

Crossing an avalanche area, only one skier at a time should be exposed they should remove their hands from pole wrist loops, loosen safety straps and pack straps, wear a hat and mitts and close their jackets, ensuring their rescue beacon is on.

A person caught in an avalanche should drop poles and backpack and try to ski to safety, he says, but when caught in the snow, the person should close his mouth and try to stay at the surface of the snow.

North Stars, Hawks Stumble Home

By The Canadian Press

It was only fitting that Minnesota North Stars and Chicago Black Hawks, battling for the No. 2 spot in the Smythe ey League, should both lose their last two games of the season.

After all, the Smythe Division is the weakest in the league but thanks to the NHL's playoff system both the Hawks and North Stars will be able to make it into post-season play which starts Tuesday night.

The North Stars, who lost 6-3 to the Canucks in Vancouver on Sunday afternoon after dropping a 7-2 verdict to the Kings in Los Angeles on Saturday, finished with 64 points and will meet Buffalo Sabres in one best-of-three preliminary series.

The Black Hawks lost 4-2 to Cleveland Barons at home Sunday night after losing 6-4 to the Flames in Atlanta on Friday and they play New York Islanders, the No. 1 seed among the non-divisional winners. The Black Hawks are the eighth seed with just 63 points.

In other playoff match-ups, Toronto Maple Leafs will tackle Pittsburgh Penguins and Los Angeles Kings will play Atlanta. The preliminary series begin Tuesday with the Islanders, Buffalo, Pittsburgh and Los Angeles having the home games.

The Kings finished their season with a 6-4 victory over Colorado Rockies on Sunday night to gain the No. 3 seed in post-season play while Pittsburgh downed Detroit Red Red Wings 4-2 to gain the fourth seed.

CANADIENS REWRITE RECORD BOOK

In other games, Boston Bruins clinched first in the Adams Division by disposing of Toronto 7-4, Montreal Canadiens defeated Washington Capitals 2-1, Atlanta and Philadelphia tied 3-3, the Islanders downed New York Rangers 5-2 and the Sabres crushed St. Louis Blues 7-3.

On Saturday, Montreal hammered Washington 11-0, Toronto and Buffalo played to a 1-1 tie, Boston topped the Islanders 5-3, Philadelphia clouted the Rangers 4-1, Pittsburgh edged Detroit 4-3 and St. Louis mauled Cleveland 9-2.

Goals by Ralph Stewart and Rick Blight eight seconds apart midway through the third period gave Vancouver its win over Minnesota.

The Canucks finished in a points tie with Chicago, but the Hawks had more victories during the season.

In Denver, centre Butch Goring scored three goals, as the Kings took a come-from-behind 6-4 victory over Colorado.

Rookie Paul Gardner had two goals for the Rockies to bring his total to 30 for the season.

The Red Wings finished their season with 11 consecutive losses by losing to Pittsburgh and also extended their winless streak to 19 games.

Both Toronto and Pittsburgh finished with 81 points, but Pittsburgh had 34 victories compared with 33 for the Leafs.

Stan Jonathan and Gregg Sheppard each scored two goals and Jean Ratelle had the 1,000th point of his NHL career on Sheppard's first goal as the Bruins defeated Toronto in Boston.

The victory, the Bruins' 14th win with two ties in the last 18 games gave them the divisional title by two points over Buffalo.

In Landover, Md., Steve Shutt extended his record for most goals by a left winger in one season to 60 Sunday night helping Montreal edge Washington. It was one of 10 league records set by Montreal. They also tied one.

Guy Lafleur scored the other Montreal goal with Bill Riley replying for the Capitals as the Canadiens recorded their 27th victory on the road this season, eclipsing the former NHL record of 26 set by Boston Bruins during the 1971-72 season and tied by Montreal last year.

Shutt, who scored two goals Saturday night to erase Bobby Hull's record of 58 set in 1968-69 while he was with Chicago Black Hawks, became the third player in the league to score 60 goals. Phil Esposito did it four times, the first when he scored 76 during the 1970-71 season for Boston Bruins. Reggie Leach of Philadelphia Flyers had 61 last season.

Lafleur brought his consecutive game points-scoring record to 28 in the first period when he scored his 56th of the season at 4:21. Lafleur has had 19 goals and 42 assists for 61 points during the streak. He finished the season leading the league with 136 points on 56 goals and 80 assists.

The victory by the Canadiens was their 60th, two more than their record of 58 set last season. Their eight losses are two fewer than the previous record of 10 for a minimum 70-game schedule which they set during the 1972-73 season.

Montreal's 132 points are five more than their record set last year and they finished with a 34-game home undefeated streak, 28 wins and six ties. Their victory over Washington Saturday night left them with a home-ice mark of 33-1-6 and the one loss is a record, bettering the former standard of two set by the Canadiens in the 1961-62 season and equalled by New York Rangers during the 1970-71 season and Philadelphia Flyers last year.

Lafleur's 80 assists and 136 points are both NHL records for either a right or left winger, while the club tied an NHL record with two 50-or-more goal scorers—Shutt and Lafleur.

Bench-Clearing Brawl Mars Third Bruin Win

You can't say the war is over when the battling has just begun.

But, barring a miraculous turnabout, the end of hostilities may be in sight for Victoria Cougars after the New Westminster Bruins recorded two more victories at the weekend to take command of their best-of-seven Western Canada Hockey League playoff series.

The Bruins defeated the Cougars 3-2 in overtime Saturday night at Memorial Arena, then pushed Victoria to the brink of elimination with a 6-4 decision in a Sunday meeting at New Westminster marred by a bench-clearing brawl.

While the first two games included hard hitting and some minor skirmishes, the playoffs has been without excessive violence—until Sunday. With the Bruins leading 5-3, both benches emptied and it took more than 15 minutes before peace was restored.

Twelve players — seven Bruins and five Cougars — were banished with game misconducts. In addition, the referee handed out 12 majors, including triple majors to Stan Smyl of New Westminster and Victoria's Ron Trafford.

The flareup was touched off by Archie Henderson of Victoria and Barry Beck, who returned to the Westminster lineup for the first time since his recent bout with pneumonia.

The Henderson-Beck embroglio appeared to be settling when Victoria forward Brent Gogol decided to challenge Beck. Gogol escaped the clutches of assistant coach Cliff Lennartz and struggled with two teammates in an effort to get at Beck.

New Westminster's Don Hobbins met Gogol and players from both benches piled onto the ice.

New Westminster coach Ernie McLean blamed Henderson while admitting he ordered his bench cleared.

"There is no way I'm going to lose a player of Beck's calibre to a guy like Henderson," McLean said. "Once the third man (Gogol) got in, the rest of my guys went in."

The brawl marred two of Victoria's better performances against New Westminster. After losing Saturday's heart-breaker at Memorial Arena when Mark Lofthouse scored at 1:06 of overtime, the Cougars threatened to pull Sunday's game out of the fire.

Defenceman Brad Maxwell doused Cougar comeback hopes with the insurance goal with about six minutes to play.

While Lofthouse emerged as Bruins' hero (he also scored to force overtime) Saturday, the Cougars were bitter about referee Doug Geiger's ruling that wiped out a Victoria goal at 5:01 of the third period.

A clearing pass by Trafford from the corner of the rink was deflected into the New Westminster goal, seemingly breaking a 2-2 tie.

Geiger, however, ruled the puck deflected off his skate and not a New Westminster defender. In normal situations, the referee is part of the play except if a goal is scored.

Had the puck touched a Bruin after glancing off Geiger's skate, the referee said he would have allowed the score. The official said no New Westminster player touched the puck, however.

The weekend losses ran Victoria's winless streak to 11 games, including the last eight of the regular schedule.

Medicine Hat Tigers, pushed by the surprising Calgary Centennials, also have reached the brink of elimination.

Defenceman Craig Topolnisky scored his second goal of the night at 1:36 of sudden-death overtime to give the Centennials a 7-6 victory and a 3-0 series lead over Medicine Hat. The fourth game will be played in Calgary tonight.

In Lethbridge, the Broncos scored twice in eight seconds and held on to defeat Saskatoon Blades 3-1. Saskatoon leads the series 2-1 with the fourth game also scheduled for tonight.

Captain Allan Young scored three times Saturday and Kamloops Chiefs deadlocked their series 1-1 by defeating Portland Winter Hawks, 4-3 Saturday. Teams shift to Portland for the third game tonight and the fourth on Wednesday.

(Summaries on Page 15)

BRAWL ENDS PLAYOFF BEFORE GAME STARTS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dauphin Kings and Kildonan North Stars started brawling during the warmup Sunday night for their Manitoba Junior Hockey League playoff game. The game and series were then suspended indefinitely.

The teams, who have had three rough games, skated onto the ice and a brawl erupted. When the fighting was over, forward Lyle Stokotelny of the Kings was bleeding profusely from a cut opened on his forehead by a skate, and team-mate Harvey Takvam was lying on the ice unconscious.

Stokotelny was taken back to Dauphin after getting stitches for his forehead in hospital. Takvam, a defenceman, was taken from the North Stars' home rink to a Winnipeg hospital, where he remained overnight for observation.

Police were called to the arena and the teams headed for their dressing rooms. Coaches, team executives, MJHL officials and police met behind closed doors. MJHL commissioner Bill Addison then announced the series was suspended.

Addison said a meeting will be held tonight between members of the MJHL and the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Associaiton, to see if the series should be continued. Prior to Sunday night, the Kings had a 2-1 edge in the best-of-seven final series.

Scott Returns to Help Celtics Topple 76ers

By The Associated Press

Everyone knows whot it meant to Boston Celtics to have Dave Cowens back in their National Basketball Association lineup. But how about Charlie Scott?

Cowens came back in mid-season after a long hiatus to give the defending NBA champions a big lift at centre while Scott came back Sunday after being out with a forearm injury and gave the Celtics backcourt a lift as Boston defeated Philadelphia '76ers 96-90.

In other NBA games Sunday night, Portland Trailblazers beat Seattle SuperSonics 119-104, Chicago Bulls turned back New Orleans Jazz 101-82, Washington Bullets stopped New York Nets 115-97, New York Knicks defeated Buffalo Braves 130-111, Milwaukee Bucks outscored Indiana Pacers 120-112, Cleveland Cavaliers beat Kansas City Kings 113-107, Denver Nuggets walloped Phoenix Suns 124-109, Atlanta Hawks beat San Antonio Spurs 124-109 and Los Angeles Lakers defeated Detroit Pistons 115-107.

In Saturday's games, Buffalo edged Milwaukee 94-93, Indiana downed Atlanta 106-99, Houston Rockets whipped Cleveland 105-93 and Seattle beat Golden State Warriors 109-102.

JoJo White's 23 points led Boston past Philadelphia. The '76ers led only once in the game at the Boston Garden when Julius Erving slammed home a stuff shot with 7:22 to play to give them an 81-80 advantage.

White then scored seven of Boston's next nine points as the '76ers jumped out to a 90-82 lead with 2:50 to play. George McGinnis, Philadelphia's top scorer with 22 points, was ejected from the game at that point when he picked up his second technical foul.

Cowens scored 20 points for the Celtics while Erving also had 20 for Philadelphia.

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson, chairman of Team Canada, announced Saturday that three players from Vancouver Canucks have been added to the Canadian roster for the world hockey championships.

The addition of the three Canucks players brings the Team Canada roster to 20.

The team leaves Tuesday for Europe where it will play a series of exhibition games before starting play in the world tournament in Vienna April 21. More players are expected to join Team Canada in Europe after their NHL and World Hockey Association clubs are eliminated from playoff contention.

Rangers Mark Frank's Return With Five-Run Winning Rally

By The Associated Press

Lucchesi, who was in hospital as a result of a fight with second baseman Len Randle, returned to the ballpark and watched his Rangers whip Houston Astros 11-7 in an exhibition game.

Lucchesi arrived just in time to watch his team stage a five-run, game-winning rally in the sixth inning. Bert Campaneris, who helped rescue Lucchesi from Randle's blows last Monday, delivered a two-run double in the rally.

The game was marred by injuries to 17 fans when a walkway section caved in at Driller Park in Tulsa, Okla. The collapse of the walkway occurred when rain stopped the game in the second inning. The fans sought cover under a grandstand section and the walkway collapsed under too much weight. No one was seriously hurt.

In other spring training action, Al Cowens hit a grand-slam homer in the eighth inning to break a tie and carry Kansas City Royals to a 7-3 decision over Baltimore Orioles. The victory was the Royals' seventh in a row.

Luis Melendez lined a two-run double in the eighth inning, leading San Diego Padres to a 6-5 victory over Oakland A's. Oakland's B team fared better, beating Milwaukee Brewers 9-7 as Rich McKinney knocked in two runs with a homer and a double.

Ken Griffey smashed a grand slam and George Foster homered with two on, powering Cincinnati Reds to a 7-6 decision over Philadelphia Phillies.

Wayne Garrett scored on Warren Cromartie's single in the fifth inning and three Montreal pitchers combined to blank New York on five hits as the Expos nipped the Mets 1-0. Rookie right-hander Mike Krukow pitched a seven shutout innings and Ivan DeJesus blasted two triples, pacing Chicago Cubs past the San Francisco Giants 3-0.

Ted Simmons hit a solo homer and Keith Hernandez scored on an error in the fourth inning as St. Louis Cardinals beat Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0. The Pirates' B squad edged Toronto Blue Jays 3-2 on a two-run single by Fernando Gonzales in the sixth inning.

Chet Lemon's run-scoring single in the ninth inning off relief ace Bill Campbell enabled Chicago White Sox to edge Boston Red Sox 4-3. Ben Oglivie hit a two-run homer to pace Detroit Tigers to a 5-0 victory that snapped New York Yankees' four-game winning streak.

Rick Monday and Steve Garvey slugged homers and Tommy John hurled seven scoreless innings, helping Los Angeles Dodgers beat California Angels 3-0. Bill Stein drilled a triple and two singles, leading Seattle Mariners to a 6-3 victory over Cleveland Indians.

Rod Carew and Larry Hisle each hit two-run homers in Minnesota's five-run third inning, helping the Twins beat Atlanta Braves 12-8.

In an off-the-field development, Kansas City released pitchers Roger Nelson and Jerry Cram to their Omaha farm club and at the same time put right-hander Steve Busby on the 21-day disabled list.

Earthquakes Win Soccer Shootout

PORTLAND (AP) — San Jose Earthquakes defeated Minnesota Kicks 1-0 in an overtime shootout Saturday night to earn first place in a four-team North American Soccer League exhibition jamboree.

Portland took third place by edging Vancouver Whitecaps 2-1. In opening-round games earlier in the evening, Minnesota edged Vancouver 1-0 and San Jose defeated Portland 2-1 in another overtime shootout.

The matches were 45 minutes long.

The championship game was scoreless at the end of 45 minutes and, in the new shootout format, each team has different players go one-on-one with the opposing goalkeeper. San Jose outscored Minnesota in the shootout, 3-2 with Ilija Mitic getting the winning goal.

Other shootout goals were scored by Paul Child and Mark Liveric for San Jose and Mike Glatergood and Tom Henson for Minnesota.

MOTORCYCLIST KILLED

CAMPIANO, Italy (AP) — American motorcyclist Randy Cleek and his mechanic, Kurt Keifer, were among six persons killed in a head-on collision between two autos Sunday night near this northern Italian town, police said today.

Cleek, 23, of Shawnee, Okla., had just competed in the 200-mile motorcycle race at Imola in which another American, Pat Evans of El Cajon, Calif., was gravely injured in a crash. Kenny Roberts of the U.S. won the race.

Police reported the car occupied by Cleek, Keifer and an Italian mechanic, Giuseppe Geraci, veered off the road on a curve and collided with an oncoming auto in which three Italians were riding.

Police said Keifer, 32, was from New Jersey.

Sockeyes Nip Clippers

RICHMOND (CP) — Richmond Sockeyes defeated Nanaimo Clippers 4-2 Sunday in overtime to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-five British Columbia Junior "A" hockey championship.

Clippers, B.C. Junior Hockey League champions, meet the Sockeyes, Pacific Coast Junior Hockey League winners, again here tonight.

The teams played through a scoreless first period, were tied 1-1 at the end of the second period, and were tied 2-2 at the end of the third, forcing the 10-minute overtime period.

Daryl Goodwin scored for Richmond in the third period before Don Bliault scored the winner at 8:39 of overtime. Rox Wheaton added an empty-net insurance goal at 9:45. Gregg Baydala scored the other Richmond goal.

Chris Rathy and Mickey Willgress scored for Nanaimo.

Richmond drew seven of 15 minor penalties, a fighting major and a game misconduct. Nanaimo had two 10-minute misconducts.

Third through fifth games of the series are scheduled Wednesday through Friday in Nanaimo.

Schwantje Captures Medal

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Carl Schwantje's round on Sunday was typical of his recent games on the golf course.

"A lot of good holes and some bad ones," said long-hitting blond from Victoria Golf Club.

The good ones outnumbered the bad, however, and Schwantje emerged as the medallist in the 28th annual Vancouver Island Open golf tournament.

Schwantje was the only par-breaker in the starting field of 120 with his 30-39—69 round over the Oak Bay course he calls home, and where the par figures are 33-37—70.

Schwantje finished three strokes ahead of Colwood professional Bob Hogarth and Nanaimo amateur Don Atkinson. Amateur Dave McCall and former tour professional John Morgan, both playing out of Uplands, were another stroke back at 73.

Scores of 78 or better were needed to qualify for one of the 32 championship berths. Only seven of the 12 who scored 78 were drawn in.

Another 32 qualified for the handicap division, and net scores of 76 or better were needed to qualify for match play in that section.

First round of match play will be held next Sunday at Cedar Hill. The draw and starting times will be published Wednesday.

Although he's "been around," Sunday's success marks only the second time Schwantje has qualified for the championship. Winner of the B.C. Amateur title in 1970, when he was 18, the 25-year-old Oak Bay member has played a limited amount of competitions in recent years.

Schwantje started out strongly with birdies on the first two holes. He was three under after nine but, like most of the competitors, ran into "some problems" on the back side.

He took his first bogey on 14, toed a tee shot on 16 to wind up with a double bogey six, and closed his round with a second bogey on 18.

"It's the way I've been playing," was Schwantje's summation. "I get a lot of good holes and some bad ones."

Tough pin placements and slick greens seemed to cause most of the problems and produced a number of major casualties.

Among those failing to qualify for the championship were Brian Gandy, defending City Amateur titleholder; and a pair of former champions — Lawrie Kerr of Colwood and Eric Hibberson of Uplands.

Kerr missed it when he four-putted the final green for an 80 but remained in the tournament by qualifying for the handicap section. Gandy was one of three net 76 scorers drawn out.

In addition to Hogarth and Morgan, other pros qualifying were Bill Wakeham, the four-time champion from Cowichan; Oak Bay assistants Doug Mahovlic and Mike Parker and Don Billsborough of Uplands.

Atkinson, a six handicapper, was the day's handicap medallist with a net 66.

First for Edwards After Three Years

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Danny Edwards looked far beyond his first career victory — and he liked what he saw.

"This is an end to what I've worked for," the 25-year-old said after his four-stroke triumph in the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

"It's an end—and it's a beginning. It's a beginning to the goals and dreams I have. Now that I've broken the ice, maybe the others will come."

Edwards' victory, his first in three years on the tour, not only provided him with $47,000 from the total purse of $235,000, but it gives him an exemption from qualifying for the first time, at least through 1978.

It also gives him a berth in the prestigious Tournament of Champions and the Masters, the first time he's been eligible for that exclusive event.

Edwards built a four-stroke lead through the first three rounds and protected it with a par 72 in the last round. The tournament was played under grey skies and the threat of rain that hung over the wet and soggy, 6,984-yard Forest Oaks Country Club course.

He won it with a 276 total, 12 under par, and was only challenged twice, both times by George Burns.

Burns closed to within two strokes after four holes, then knocked himself out of it with a quadruple-bogey eight on the seventh. He hit his second shot out of bounds, missed the green with his next and eventually three-putted.

Burns rallied to close within two again with a birdie on the 15th, but hit into the gallery on the 17th and had to work hard for a bogey.

Burns tied for second at 280 with Larry Nelson. Each had a 72. Grier Jones birdied his last two holes for a 69 and fourth at 281. Gil Morgan was next at 70-282, while Hale Irwin shot a 75 and finished at 284.

Defending champion Al Gieberger shot 71-284 and, with $5,660, became the game's 13th $1-million career winner. He now has $1,004,835.

With Howe Sidelined, Aeros Continue Slump

By The Canadian Press

On the surface, this would appear to be the case as the Aeros have won only once and lost four World Hockey Association encounters since an ankle injury sidelined 49-year-old Gordie Howe two weeks ago. The latest defeat was 7-3 Sunday night to Indianapolis Racers.

However, the fact that Houston has had the West Division championship locked up since March 29 may have something to do with the recent Aero letdown.

The one victory the Aeros have managed without Howe was the division-clinching 5-2 decision they took from the Jets in Winnipeg on March 29.

In other Sunday games, the Jets downed Calgary Cowboys 6-4, while San Diego Mariners blasted Quebec Nordiques 7-0.

On Saturday, Winnipeg edged Birmingham Bulls 6-5, Calgary tied Edmonton Oilers 4-4, New England Whalers shaded Indianapolis 3-2, Quebec outscored Phoenix Roadrunners 6-5 and San Diego dumped Cincinnati Stingers 6-3.

Indianapolis coach Jacques Demers says the Aeros miss Howe even though he's fourth in team scoring with 24 goals and 44 assists in 62 games.

Indianapolis, after dropping the Saturday contest in overtime, scored five third-period goals to down the Aeros. The win assures the Racers of at least a third-place finish in the East Division.

Cam Connor, Terry Ruskowski and Larry Lund replied for the Aeros.

At Winnipeg, Anders Hedberg scored two goals and set up two others to pace the Jets' attack and prevent Calgary from moving ahead of Edmonton and into sole possession of fourth place and the final playoff berth in the West.

Edmonton and Calgary are tied with 68 points and both have home games remaining against Birmingham and Winnipeg. Should the two clubs end in a tie, the Oilers would advance to the playoffs on the basis of more victories than the Cowboys.

Phil Cotter Leads Field In Bike Race

Phil Cotter broke away from his closest rival on the last of four laps in a 54-kilometer Victoria Wheelers bicycle road race Sunday around Happy Valley, Latoria and Metchosin roads.

Cotter finished with a time of one hour, 29.38 minutes and Michel Peron placed second in the combined junior-senior event in 1:30.23.

Following were Philip Quillewere (1:32.52) and Tony Friedrick (1:32.53).

Bob Rainsford won a mass-finish novice race with a time of 49.50 minutes for 27 km. Tony Wakelin was second in 49.15, Bill Thwaits was third in 49.16 and Phil Langrish was fourth in 49.16.

After winning the "C" class in the Volunteer Park Criterion on Saturday, McLellan went on to finish 6th in the combined A and B category of a 72-mile road race Sunday. Dave Emery of Victoria was fourth in the "C" class.

The next club event will be a 46 km road race on Sunday, April 17, which will count toward the Best All Round trophy.

Colts Clip Rams

Whitworth Wins By One Stroke

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, winner of 77 tournaments in her 18 years of women's pro golf, finally won the richest women's event Sunday with a one-stroke victory in the $305,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle.

Whitworth shot a one-under-par 71 over the final round at Mission Hills Country Club to finish at one-over-par 289 and win the $36,000 first prize.

JoAnne Carner and longshot Sally Little finished a stroke behind at 290, two over par for the event.

The 37-year-old Whitworth, the Ladies' Professional Golf Association's top career money winner with more than $675,000 in earnings, began the final round at 218 and a stroke back of three co-leaders.

But Judy Rankin, Betty Burfeindt and Pat Bradley, who shared the lead after three rounds, all had problems in the final round.

Rankin, the Winners Circle defending champion, struggled to a final-day 76 and a 293 total. Bradley had a closing 76 to finish five over at 293, and Burfeindt finished with a 79 for a 296 finish.

Sandra Post, formerly of Oakvill Ont., won $2,240, finishing with a 73 for a 300 total. Jocelyn Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., had a 78 Sunday for a 322 total, taking home $525.

Brent Patterson Funeral Thursday

Saanich Braves, visibly shaken by the death of forward Brent Patterson on Saturday, decided to play their last game of the season "because that is the way he would have wanted it."

Patterson, who turned 21 in January, died early Saturday morning in Quesnel, several hours after participating in a British Columbia junior "B" championship game.

Quesnel Millionaires won Friday's game 7-3 and then swept the best-of-three series by scoring a 7-4 victory Saturday over the defending champions.

Saanich coach Bayden Robinson said he considered postponing or forfeiting the second game after learning of Patterson's death. However, the team met Saturday morning and voted to continue with the series "because that's the way Brent would have wanted it."

Patterson scored one of the goals Friday and complained of chest pains during the second period. When the pains persisted, he was removed from the game and admitted to hospital.

An autopsy was scheduled to be held today in Prince George.

One of the three hockey-playing sons of Clem and Jane Patterson, Brent was only five-foot-seven but was one of the standouts in the South Island Junior "B" League.

A heart problem was tentatively diagnosed as the cause of his death but his mother said Saturday "he had no record of heart troubles. Brent was never seriously ill in his life."

In addition to his parents, Brent is survived by brothers Mark and Tracy and two sisters, Julie and Lisa.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at Sands Memorial Chapel, starting at 3 p.m.

DEFAULT WIN FOR VIKINGS

Happy Weekend for Sandy

SANDY HAWLEY
. . . two handicap wins

Canadian jockey Sandy Hawley had a big weekend on the Santa Anita track in California, riding a total of nine winners in two days and scoring a pair of handicap victories.

The Ontario rider was aboard four winners Sunday, including Today 'n Tomorrow, which staged a late rush to lead the field to the wire in the mile and one-eighth San Bernardino Handicap, a $57,800 event. Exact Duplicate was second and Rajab was third.

Hawley guided five mounts into the winners' circle Saturday, topping his day's work with a successful effort on Mark's Place, a four-length winner of the $44,250 San Simeon Handicap.

Mark's Place, carrying 122 pounds, covered the seven furlongs in 1:21 on a fast track to return $6.20, $3.40 and $3.00. Maheras, ridden by Laffit Pincay Jr., finished second. Painted Wagon with Jerry Lambert up was third.

Hawley, who moved into seventh place in the jockey standings with his performance, began his string with Paddy Walk in the first race, then followed with wins aboard Samburu in the fourth, Money or Eats in the fifth and Krassata in the seventh.

At Hot Springs, Ark., favorite Clever Tell scored a four-length victory in the $100,000-added Arkansas Derby, completing a rare double for his trainer and jockey.

Clever Tell, who equalled a track record in winning the Louisiana Derby on March 20, covered the one and one-eighth miles in 1:50 3-5.

His stablemate, Soy Numero Uno, won the $100,000-added Oaklawn Handicap on Friday. Both he and Clever Tell are trained by Homer Pardue and ridden by Ray Brousard.

The victory propelled Clever Tell on his way to Kentucky and prep races leading up to the Kentucky Derby.

At Hialeah, Fla., All Friends held off favored Gravelines by three-quarters of a length to win the $67,900 Bougainvillea Handicap.

Gravelines, the 4-5 choice, finished second a length ahead of commanding Lead.

The Irish-bred All Friends, with Erlie Fires aboard, covered the mile and three-sixteenths in 1:52 4-5. He has won all three of his starts in the United States.

At New York's Aqueduct, Cinteelo won the $55,000 Westchester Handicap by 4½ lengths over even-money favorite Turn and Count.

Cinteelo, an invader from Florida, ran the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:43 2-5 with Eddie Maple in the saddle.

Cheshire Scores Second Triumph

Cheshire Grammar Schools of Northern England boosted their tour record to 2-0 Sunday by tripping James Bay Athletic Association Juniors 12-9 in an exhibition rugby match at Macdonald Park.

Clive Kershaw led the visitors by kicking two penalty goals while Steve Bennett booted a drop goal and Gerry Williams kicked a single penalty goal.

Nanaimo topped Velox "A" 22-3 in the final match of the regular Second division season Saturday in the Hub City.

Vampires nudged Velox 14-12 in a third division tussle Sunday.

In exhibition play at the weekend, Ebb Tide Blanked Castaways III 6-0; HMNZS Otago II bounced Agrarians II 29-3 and HMNZS Otago III edged Powell River, 7-6.

BIG PAYOFF IN 'QUARTE'

About 80 winners each drew 327,131 francs (about $72,000) for a stake of five francs.

The bet was the "Quarte," which the French Jockey Club occasionally substitutes for the popular Sunday "Tierce," which requires backers to name only the first three finishers.

Sweden Downs Canada in Final

By SCOTT ABBOTT

KARLSTAD, Sweden (CP) — At age 23, Ragnar Kamp of Harnosand, Sweden, has the whole curling world in his hands.

Kamp skipped his Swedish rink to an 8-5 victory over Jim Ursel of Montreal to win the world championship Sunday night, proving that youth can beat experience, at least some of the time.

"In this competition we're lucky enough to be the best," Kamp, who studies forestry in Stockholm, said of himself and the three other students who make up his team—third Hakan Rudstrom, 20, his brother Bjorn, 22, at second and lead Christer Martensson, 22.

It was the second time Sweden has won the Air Canada Silver broom, emblematic of the world title. Kjell Oscarius won it in 1973 in Regina against home-town favorite Harvey Mazinke.

"They played a lot of garbage," Ursel said. "But I expected that. Kamp plays a good come-around. They made the big shots, like in the 10th end. They made a perfect hit-and-roll and hid."

Canada was leading 5-4 and lying three when Bjorn Rudstrom pulled off the shot to which Ursel referred, and it gave Sweden shot rock. Canadian third Art Lobel then committed the first of his two mistakes in the end, wiping out a Canadian stone. Hakan Rudstrom split the house with a rock on the edge of the 12-foot before Lobel knicked a Swedish guard out of the way, but protected their shot rock with his own.

Rudstrom then put another biter next to his 12-foot stone and Ursel had to draw into the fourfoot, partially guarded. Kamp took that rock out and stopped on the four-foot himself. When Ursel's second shot stopped short of the house, Sweden was counting four and didn't need Kamp's last stone.

"I'm quite disappointed," said a subdued Brian Ross, the Canadian lead. "I'm just happy it was a well-curled game and there's nothing to be ashamed of."

Ross had said Saturday that the Canadian rink, which also included second Don Aitken, wanted to show the Swedes something because they needed to be "brought down a couple of pegs."

Nobody could slow the calm Kamp in the final, however, as he fired 71 per cent and demonstrated the confidence he had shown throughout the competition.

Ross agreed with Ursel, who said it had been a long year and he didn't want to look ahead to next year and another try for Canada's first world championship since Orest Meleschuk won in 1972.

"I've made it known to an awful lot of people that I'm thinking of giving the whole thing up, but that's not official," Ross said.

"They're upset at work that I'm away for five weeks in the winter and it's sort of a long haul."

Ursel shot a disappointing 53 per cent in the championship game after firing a 94 in Canada's 8-5 semi-final victory Saturday night over Ken Horton's rink from Scotland. Sweden beat the defending champions from the United States, skipped by Bruce Roberts of Hibbing, Minn., 5-0 in the other semi-final.

Wests Finish First; Duncan, A's Win

Victoria West captured first place in the premier division of the Vancouver Island Soccer Leage by playing to a 2-2 deadlock with University of Victoria Vikings in a Saturday match at Royal Atheltic Park.

On Sunday, Duncan Powels Men's Wear captured the second division playoff title with a 4-1 decision over Prspect Lake at Duncan and Victoria Atheltics won the third division playoff crown with a 3-1 over Vantreights at Haywood Avnue Park.

The tie enabled Victoria West to break a tie for first place with Victoria Athletics, who were the defending premier division champions.

Nanaimo and Vikings finished in a tie for third but the Hub City crew took the higher spot because of a 12-10 edge in wins.

Vic Escude narrowed the gap at 65 minutes and Dan Lomas connected for the equalizer at the 78-minute mark on a penalty shot awarded after John Leier was tripped in the penalty area.

Vikings and Athletics meet in a semi-final at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Roal Athletic Park while Nanaimo meet in the other semi later this month.

Archie Harris, Greg Chaster, Graham Gow and Eddie Paves scoerd for Duncan while Mike Wallace averted a shutout for Prospect Lake.

RECORD WON'T COUNT; TIMER DIDN'T WORK

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Johnny "Gold Medal" Jones ran the fastest 100-metre dash on record Saturday, but his clocking of 9.85 will not be allowed as a world mark because the electronic timer failed to funcion during the race.

Jones' time was recorded in the invitational 100-metre dash at the 50th Texas Relays. The University of Texas freshman easily whipped a field that included Olympic silver medalist Dwaye Evans of Arizona and Pan American Games gold medal winner Bill Collins.

Jones' 9.85 was a full tenth of a second below the established world mark set nine years ago by Jim Hines.

But the ACCU-Track timer did not start and the hand-held time will not be recognized by the International Track and Field Federation.

Sidney Air Cadets Canadian Champions

The B.C. team captured the Steel Challenge Trophy with an aggregate total of 3,851 out of a possible 4,000.

Ontario was second with 3,818 and Manitoba was third at 3,699.

Steve Paton of British Columbia had the top individual total of 784 of a possible 800 while clubmate Colin Plint was second with 777.

An Ontario shooter, T. Filer, finished third with 775 and Joanne Harrison, the only girl on the B.C. team, placed fourth with 770.

Dull, Simple Payday

NICE, France (AP)—Bjorn Borg of Sweden survived a sluggish start Sunday and wore down Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, 6-4, 1-6, 6-2, 6-0 in the finals of the Nice Grand Prix, Europe's first clay court tennis tournament of the season.

It was a dull, simple $8,750 payday on the Nice Lawn Tennis Club red clay for Borg, who seemed to find his pace as the match progressed, allowing the Argentine only four points in the final love set.

"I like to play hurt," Borg said of Vilas. "We play the same. I'm surprised I was so good. It was easy. I was a little drowsy at first. But I seem to be making the transition to clay without any problems. Usually it takes a week to 10 days to get used to it. This time it worked right off."

Vilas, who lost to Borg in the WCT finals in Dallas, won the first three games in the first set from Borg when the Swede seemed to play in a daze. The Wimbledon champion had lost an hour of sleep through the changover to summer time in France and miscalculated when he had to get up.

But Borg won the next three games, took the lead 5-4, and then showed Vilas who was in control in the 10th game by winning a rally in which the ball crossed the net 77 times.

The last set lasted barely 20 minutes. Borg broke service immediately and then watched Vilas's errors accumulate. The Argentine was into the third game before he won a point and then kicked the fourth and fifth away with shots into the net before Borg raced through the final game on his own service.

PATIENT EVERT CRUSHES KING

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Chris Evert methodically disposed of Billy Jean King, a long-time pro on the comeback trail, 6-0, 6-1, in the final of the women's tennis tournament Sunday.

Evert played her usual patient game from the baseline to defeat King who was sidelined for five months after undergoing knee surgery last fall.

The last time the two United States veterans had met in tournament play was at the semi-finals of the 1975 Wimbledon, where King defeated Evert en route to the title. After winning that championship King retired from singles tournament play. This week's event was her first major singles tournament since then.

Evert, the top woman player in the world today, claimed the $25,000 top prize in Sunday's victory, her 106th in a row on clay courts. Her last loss on the surface came at the hands of Australian Evonne Goolagong in the 1973 world championships at Cincinnati.

In the consolation match for third place, Australia's Kerry Reid defeated Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 8-2 in a one-set match.

DIBBS TAKES RICH PRIZE

LONDON (AP) — Second-seeded Eddie Dibbs of the United States outlasted fellow American Vitas Gerulaitis 7-6, 6-7, 6-4 and captured Britan's biggest-ever prize of $30,000 in the finals of the $100,000 World Championship tennis tournament Sunday. The match lasted two hours and 18 minutes.

Schueler Shifts

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies have sold relief pitcher Ron Schueler to Minnesota Twins in a straight cash deal. Schueler had issued a start-me-or-trade-me ultimatum to the Phillies. Paul Owens, the National League baseball team's personnel director, said the Phillies were happy with Schueler, but strictly as a bullpen reliever.

Former Champs To Be Honored

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Fifty-four years ago Jean Borotra and Kitty McKane stood on centre court at Wimbledon to receive their prizes as the men and ladies singles champions. They will re-enact the scene on June 20 when the world's oldest tennis tournament celebrates its 100th anniversary.

Borotra, 78, and Mrs. McKane-Godfree, 80, will lead a parade of nearly 40 former singles champions, according to the program for the centenary championships.

Elizabeth Ryan, 85, doubles partner of Suzanne Lenglen and winner of the first of her 19 titles in 1914, and Jacques Brugnon, 82, of France, doubles champion in 1926, will represent all the doubles winners.

The Duke of Kent will present each of the champions with a commemorative medal before the start of the two weeks of play on June 20. This will follow a lunch for exactly 100 persons. Including the invited titleholders, a number of whom are competing. Borotra, the oldest contestant this year, will appear in the veterans' doubles.

Mrs. McKane-Godfree wants it known that she still plays the game but there is no competition for veteran ladies.

The centenary coincides with Queen Elizabeth's silver jubilee and Her Majesty will present special silver salvers to the men and women's singies champions on finals day. Since her sporting love is horses rather than tennis, this will be her first visit to Wimbledon in 15 years.

There will be a full Royal turnout for finals day — Prince Philip, Princess Margaret, the Duke and Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of Gloucester among them.

What's Pete Worth?

PETE ROSE
. . . issues ultimatum

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds, using a half-page newspaper advertisement to defend their position in the bitter salary dispute with Pete Rose, said they "seriously question" whether the 10-time all-star wants to remain with the baseball club.

The Reds said Rose "surprised us" during negotiations by mentioning a trade, "and specifically said he would go to the Phils, Yankees, Red Sox, Dodgers, Padres or Angels."

Departing from club policy on money matters, Reds' management outlined the history of the deadlocked negotiations and revealed that Rose has refused a $135,000-a-year raise.

The diclosures, carried in the Sunday editions of Cincinnati and Dayton newspapers, said the stalemate "boils down to what Pete Rose thinks he is worth and what our ball club feels he is worth. The question is, what is fair?"

Saying "we don't like to air dirty linen," the ads said "we simply cannot permit one player to jeopardize" the financial stability and future of the club.

The unprecedented public presentation comes in the wake of mounting support for Rose, the most popular player in the club's history.

The 36-year-old three-time batting champion is demanding $400,000 a year, reasoning that he deserves pay comparable to that given several free agents who recently signed multi-million dollar contracts.

Last week, Rose issued an ultimation to the club. He said his demands would escalate $25,000 a month if he is not signed by opening day, next Wednesday.

At that time, General Manager Dick Wagner said: "There is no way we will pay Pete Rose $400,000 a year."

The Reds said they have moved from an original offer of $200,000 for the 1977 season to $325,000.

Mets Talk of Trade

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — New York Mets said Saturday they have talked with Los Angeles Dodgers about a possible trade for unsigned slugger Dave Kingman, adding that his contract demands are $800,000 more than the club's final offer.

In a blistering attack on Kingman, which included computer figures showing that he is a below-average clutch hitter despite his numerous home runs, Joe McDonald, the Mets' general manager, said he was convinced Kingman would play out his option.

For the first time, McDonald disclosed the salary the club has offered, as well as Kingman's asking price. He said the Mets' final offer was $200,000 a year for anywhere from two to six years while Kingman is asking $2 million for six years after coming down from an original demand of $2.7 million.

During the off-seaon, Kingman asked the Mets to keep the contract negotiations private. McDonald issued his remarks after Kingman held a number of news conferences on his own earlier in spring training, attacking the Mets' management and saying the club's salary policy is in the dark ages.

"We have made a final offer to Dave and we are so far apart we are convinced he is going to play out his option," McDonald said.

The Biggest Party in North America

ALBERTA'S SWINGIN' SUMMER

Like costume parties? Here's a chance to put on a store-bought cowboy hat and act like you're on the set of a western movie. Or get all gussied up in home made ruffles, or vest and high hat.

Hi there, Klondike Kate. Hi, Cowpoke!

Like dancing? Well come and square dance in the streets. Or polka. Or waltz. Or boogie in a night spot that's never been livelier.

Like parades? Big name entertainers? Chorus lines and comedy? Midways? A little fling in the casinos? A wager on a horse with your luckiest cousin's name? Carryin' on 'till all hours?

All you have to do is be here — in Alberta — this summer. Anytime between July 8th and July 30th.

There isn't another party like it. Over a million Albertans get involved, starting in Calgary then moving on to Edmonton.

It's a party in the streets, in the stores, in restaurants and nightspots, in apartments and homes, in front of the grandstand, on the ferris wheels and rocket rides, in a 16,000-seat coliseum — and in the air, if you just left the back of a wild Brahma bull. (Some party, eh?)

It covers 200 miles and more than three weeks of sheer fun and excitement. The Calgary Stampede and Edmonton's Klondike Days.

There's nothing like it in North America. And you're invited.

You'll make new friends. (If it takes more than five minutes, that's unsociable.) And you'll have more to see, do and enjoy than anywhere else we can think of.

What are you waiting for? If you're planning your summer vacation, make sure all or part of it is in Alberta while our big party is in full swing.

On the other hand there's no way to miss a good time, because you'll find lots of the spirit that makes Klondike Days and the Stampede so much fun, anytime you come. If you're with a large group, we can even stage a mini Stampede or Klondike Days for you.

For planning information, just write The Biggest Party in North America, P.O. Box 16000, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada T5J 2P4

Daring Move by Andretti

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) —Mario Andretti, with a courageous late braking manoeuvre, took the lead from Jody Scheckter only three laps from the finish and scored a dramatic victory in Sunday's U.S. Grand Prix West.

Andretti, in becoming the first U.S. driver to win one of his country's two Grand Prix races, edged pole position starter Niki Lauda by scant feet after a close race the entire distance between the top three finishers.

Scheckter's Wolf-Ford, which made a startlingly quick start and darted past Lauda, led the first 76 laps, but finally was forced aside by Andretti at the end of the long backstretch.

Andretti, whose Lotus was not as quick off the corners as the Wolf, entered by Canadian industrialist Walter Wolf of Montreal, kept on the throttle dangerously long going into the corner, and hit the brakes later than Scheckter. Andretti took the lead going into the corner, and Scheckter made a desperate move — which failed — to repass in the corner. Lauda also got past at that point.

Scheckter faded to finish three seconds behind Lauda. Officially, Lauda was .773 seconds behind Andretti, who averaged a record 86.89 miles an hour around the 2.02-mile course through the streets of downtown Long Beach.

TITANS EVEN RECORD WITH ONE-POINT WIN

DUNGANNON, North Ireland — Victoria High School Titans balanced the record on their seven-match rugby tour of the British Isles with a narrow 9-8 decision over Royal School here Saturday.

Waltrip Cracks Victory Drought

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip captured his first Grand National auto race Sunday when the $156,185 Rebel 500 ended in controversy with the yellow caution flag out for the final six laps.

Brookes's Ford slammed against tht wall and J. D. McDuffie's Chevrolet went spinning on the turn as the four leaders came through.

All four leaders manoeuvred their way through the wreck, but Waltrip, fourth at the time, managed to come out on top before the caution flag was dropped, officials ruled.

Waltrip, 30, had finished second four times in Grand National races but had never won. He averaged 128.817 miles an hour over the 1.366-mile, 367-lap oval.

Donnie Allison's Chevrolet was awarded second, Petty was third and Pearson fourth. Benny Parsons, who was another lap back, finished fifth.

Allison, however, was forced to leave the race after about 300 miles, suffering from a headache and nausea. He was replaced in the Chevrolet by brother Bobby, who nearly won the first prize for his brother.

MICKEY ROACH DIES

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP) — Michael (Mickey) Roach, former hockey star who played with New York Americans in the National Hockey League during the 1920s, has died at the age of 82.

Spriggs Springs Cycling Surprise

YOUBOU — Martin Spriggs of the Victoria Motorcycle Club dominated two classes Sunday in the annual Cowichan Creek trials near here.

Spriggs nipped Bob Todosychuk of North Vancouver, the No. 2 rider in Canada, by one clean ride to post an upset victory in the expert class. Mark Gray of Sechelt, the defending champion, finished third.

Victoria riders also won the other two classes.

Greg Lohrmann beat out Rob Steel of Sooke in the schoolboy category.

In a two-team competition for the Valvoline Trophy, one of the oldest events in the Pacific Northwest, the Canadian Pacific Trials Association squad of Todosychuk, Gray and Bill Sparks retained the laurels by beating out the VMC team of Spriggs, Nordstrom and Roger Boothroyd.

Competitors from many areas of Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland attended the event.

Hurrykings swept the best-of-three series in straight games. They outshot the Vancouver Island champions 64-32 in the final game.

Horsenap Victim Wins Race

NAPLES (AP) — American bred trotting champion Wayne Eden, who made front-page headlines more than one year ago after being Italy's first horsenapping victim, won the rich Agnano race paired to a national lottery Sunday.

Six-year-old Wayne Eden was snatched from his stall at Montecatini in August, 1975. He was found 15 days later, limping but in generally good condition.

His owner never disclosed whether he had paid a ransom for Wayne Eden, valued at the time at $800,000.

'Jam-Jerusalem' Not for Them

By SANDRA SALMANS
New York Times

ABERGAVENNY, Wales — The postman calls only once a week and the milkman on the alternate days at some cottages fringing this town in South Wales. When Colin and Marie Price moved here five years ago, they enjoyed the isolation, but shortly after the birth of their daughter Samantha in 1973, Marie Price noticed that she was forgetting how to talk.

"I suddenly realized that I didn't have anything to say to my husband, except what the baby had done that day," she recalled. "When we went out with other people, I realized, 'My God, I haven't got anything to talk about!' "

Hoping to meet people, she joined a yoga class. "At the end of 12 weeks I could stand on my head, but I still hadn't spoken to the person next to me," she said.

So the 30-year-old Mrs. Price did what thousands of other British women have done. She joined the National Housewives Register, a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization that describes itself as "a meeting point for the lively-minded woman." Women who are less than lively-minded are cautioned that the informal groups discuss only "topics not connected with domesticity." Knitting during the meetings is considered bad form.

Such guidelines distinguish the organization from Britain's more traditional hymn-singing women's groups, to which one member of the housewives' register refers as the "jam-and-Jerusalem crowd."

"In some rural areas, the only evening classes are dressmaking and cookery, or cookery and dressmaking," says Mrs. Price who was recently elected national organizer for the organization. "It's ofter NHR or nothing," she said.

The National Housewives Register dates to 1960 when a writer for The Guardian complained about the poor quality of "food and thought" in suburbs. No one else seemed to mind the food, but in a few days the newspaper published a letter from a suburban housewife who proposed a national register of "like-minded friends" who could be reached wherever one moved. A torrent of letters followed; the register was on its way.

The organization's records, once kept in shopping bags — one bag per county — are now in two file cabinets in the Prices' new bungalow. Every day, Mrs. Price receives 30 to 70 inquiries about the register. There are 25,000 members paying dues of $1.30 a year, in 870 groups in Britain. Expatriates have established outposts in Euorpe, South Africa, Hong Kong , Australia and Canada.

There are some Americans in the British groups but there are no branches in the United States. The reason, Mrs. Price suspects, is that Americans are so friendly that a register is unnecessary. As a former Londoner, she says she found that in Abergavenny, "you have to live here for 20 years to be accepted."

Virtually all the women who join the register are relative newcomers who have followed their husband's careers to new towns. While some groups span three generations and include divorced women, most members are married and their children live at home. They usually have some kind of college degree, "or at leaast haven't left school at the first opportunity," says Mrs. Price, who has a degree in commercial studies. On graduation, many worked as teachers, nurses, social workers or secretaries until the birth of the first child.

Making Rooms Larger

By PAULINE GRAVES

Let's face it, new house construction gives you rooms that are smaller than in the past. Builders face high land costs and rising building costs; consequently they try to put as many homes as possible on a parcel of land. To provide the number of rooms demanded by buyers, three bedrooms, two baths and a family room, rooms are smaller. However, open planning, high ceilings, mirrors, these all visually increase a room's size and make it easier to live with.

Cathedral ceilings, or living room ceilings that slope up from the normal 8½-foot height at the exterior wall, to 12 feet or more at the opposite wall, following the roof, are the most favored device for enlarging a room. This leaves you with an enormous wall space to fill. A large hanging or a picture gallery wall look attractive, but also are expensive. As an alternative here is an idea, by decorator Mel Grau, that is ingenious, fairly easily done and gives depth to the wall.

Key Legislation in Wings for Women

elizabeth forbes

Dedicated interest of women's groups across Canada in the current Human Rights Bill C-25, expected to pass in the House of Commons soon, may have led many of these women to miss the fact there is another legislative project of special interest to them waiting in the wings — a proposed Social Service Act that Minister of Health and Welfare Marc Lalonde (also responsible for the status of women) expects to present any time now.

This legislation, as he has explained, is the culmination of several years of consultation and negotiation that has resulted in agreements with all 10 provinces. And in it will be found a strong awareness of the changing roles of women—and men, too— in today's society.

If passed, this bill will replace the Canada Assistance Plan Act and the Vocational Rehabilitation of Disabled Person's Act, and go well beyond these two in the range of services that it offers to cost share.

ENCOURAGEMENT

Its intent is to encourage people to be self-reliant, and to live socially-useful and satisfying lives.

Lalonde has also indicated that it will enable the provinces to share with the federal government in the cost of providing a wide range of services, from crisis intervention (such as rape crisis centres) to rehabilitive services (such as counselling).

Among the types of services covered in this proposed new Act are two that apply especially to women.

First is family planning services which would be funded on the basis of being provided free to anyone.

Through this section of the Act the federal government is offering to share the cost of providing these services to all Canadians and not just to those with limited incomes.

DAY CARE

Under the proposed Social Services Act, day care services would be subsidized on the basis of user-charge guidelines which would be considerably more generous than those under the Canada Assistance Plan.

In shaping this section of the legislation Lalonde has said, "we were guided by an awareness that most parents work out of economic need."

The high cost of day care services is a heavy one for nearly all families to bear, he contended, and for that reason, "we have broadened the realm of potential federal funding for day care services considerably, making it possible for more middle income families to have access to these services on a scale-to-income basis."

HOME WORKERS

Speaking early in March to a National Women's Organizations' Consultation meeting in Ottawa, he also raised the question of women's role within the family which he said "deserved full recognition by society."

Marriage is an economic, as well as a social partnership, he pointed out and "most often" there are three components of this economic partnership-homemaking, child-rearing and wage earning.

Conditions should be changed so that women—and men—are free to make informed choices about the direction of their lives, free from legal barriers, and from social ones.

Women working outside the home must be accorded the same opportunities as men, he said.

At the same time, women who choose to make their careers the home, for at least part of their lives, "must have social recognition of the value of their functions."

With this in mind, federal and provincial governments have discussed amendments to Canada and Quebec Pension Plan Acts, to include homemakers.

PENSION CREDITS

The first change endorsed by all the provinces, and that has been well publicized, will allow pension credits to be split between spouses upon divorce.

So far, the second, which is more complex, has not been accepted by Ontario.

It would allow women, or men who stay at home to raise children up to the age of seven years, to drop out the number of years at home in calculating their pension entitlement on retirement.

An important point to note here is that when in force, this provision would be retroactive and would apply to all spouses who dropped out of the labor force temporarily to raise children, since the Canada Pension Plan began in 1966.

Moving to the international scene, Lalonde spoke of Canada's participation in the session of the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women, held in Geneva, last autumn, where a draft Convention to Eliminate Discrimination Against Women, was drawn up.

Before any decision is taken on ratifying such a Convention, he said, there would be close consultation between federal and provincial governments.

Forget Trial Basis

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 36 years. He is 64 and I am 57. There has been no sex in our bedroom for the last six or seven years. Not even any signs of affection. He has even refused to kiss me, saying I would only expect it to lead to something else, and he is impotent and can't deliver.

Now it turns out that he has found another woman and wants a "trial separation." He leased an apartment for six months and he's living with her on a "trial basis." He says at the end of the six months he'll let me know whether he wants me or her.

The other woman is 38 and divorced, and you can't tell me that she's satisfied to just hold hands every night. I asked him about his "impotency" and he said the doctor gave him some pills that are supposed to rejuvenate him sexually. Naturally I don't know if the pills are working. (Maybe I should ask his new friend?)

I have talked to an attorney and he gave me the name of a psychiatrist. I am NOT crazy. I just want to know if I should wait six months or force a decision.

If he decides to stay with her, I want to go on a cruise around the world. The ship sails in June and I don't want to miss it. What should I do?—Elsie.

DEAR ELSIE: Don't hang around waiting for your husband to decide whether he wants you or not. Get on that ship and Bon Voyage!

DEAR ABBY: How old do you think a girl should be before she starts seeing a gynecologist and stops seeing a pediatrician? This is a point of disagreement between my mother and me, and we would like to settle it by asking you. — GIRL

DEAR GIRL: When a girl reaches the age where she feels uncomfortable seeing a pediatrician and prefers to see a gynecologist, she's ready to switch.

DEAR ABBY: Just before Christmas I read a letter in your column signed TOO LATE from a man who never found time to visit his elderly parents, even though they lived nearby. He said he always found time to visit friends and go other places, and now that his parents are dead he had deep regrets.

I must have had a guilty conscience, because one night I awakened suddenly at 3 a.m., decided to cancel the plans I had already made for Christmas and went to my parents' house instead.

Abby, it was the most wonderful Christmas I've ever had! Mom and Dad were so thrilled to see me, it made me ashamed.

The next morning, my father called to tell me that Mom had died in her sleep! I couldn't believe it. She had been so well and happy the night before.

I just want to thank you for printing that letter. If I hadn't read it, I would have continued in my selfish ways and missed spending my mother's last evening with her. God bless you. T.A.T.

Growing Pains? Find Solution In Basement

By A. J. HAND
Los Angeles Times

A lot of North American families are outgrowing their present homes. But the cost of new and larger homes is getting so high, many of these families can't afford to move. If you find yourself faced with this problem, the solution may be right in your own basement.

It doesn't take much work to turn a dank, uninviting basement into comfortable living space. In most cases just finishing off the walls, ceiling and floors will do the trick. And most of this work you can do yourself, so your costs can be surprisingly low. Interested? Start with the walls.

First step: Make sure the walls are watertight. If your basement walls leak water or weep during the wet season, you'll have to seal them before you do anything else.

Walls watertight? Decide how you want to finish them. The easiest and cheapest thing to do is paint them. But if you go this route you won't be able to insulate, and this will cost you money in the long run, not to mention comfort. A better idea is to panel or cover the walls with gypsum board. This lets you insulate and provides space to run concealed electrical wiring.

Here's how to do it: Measure the length of the walls you wish to cover. Multiply this total in feet by three-fourths. The resulting number is the number of 8-foot 2-by-3s you'll need to frame a wooden wall against your present masonry walls. This framing will provide space for the insulation and a surface to which you can fasten your finished wall surface.

To frame the wall, fasten a sill of 2-by-3s to the floor with special hardened masonry nails about three inches long. Then nail a top plate of 2-by-3s to the bottom of the floor joists. Then toe nail in the studs, spaced 24 inches apart, center to center. Add an extra stud (detail A in the sketch) at the corners of the basement so you'll have something to nail your gypsum board or paneling to. See the sketch for details on this wall framing.

If you plan to have electricity or heating installed, now is the time to do it. Whether you do the job yourself or hire a pro, the work will go much faster and easier before the insulation and finished wall surface are installed.

Insulating? The best material for insulating your basement walls is R-7 foil-faced mineral wool blankets 24 inches wide. If you just can't locate R-7 blankets (2½ inches thick) you can use R-11 blankets. These will cost you more, however. Get enough insulation to run between all the studs, from floor to ceiling, plus an extra roll.

Install the insulation, foil side facing you, by stapling its paper flanges to the studs. If you have R-7 blankets, staple the flanges to the inner edges of the studs. If you have R-11 blankets, staple the flanges to the stud faces. This will allow the thicker R-11 blankets to fit better.

Use the extra roll of insulation to cover the area above your newly framed wall as shown in detail B. This is a small area, but it loses a lot of heat unless insulated, so don't be tempted to skip it.

By MICHAEL LAMM

Dear Mike: I drive a 1973 VW Beetle. I've been told that holding down the clutch pedal at red lights wears something out. Is this true? Last week I had to replace the clutch and flywheel.—VW LOVER.

Dear Lover: It's true, but that's not why you had to replace your clutch disc and flywheel. What happens when your engine idles at a red light — if you sit there with your foot holding down the clutch, you're putting a load on the clutch throwout bearing. This bearing then wears more than it would otherwsie. A worn throwout bearing makes noise and causes rough clutch action. Replacing the bearing is almost as expensive as replacing a clutch disc. So whenever you're idling at a light (or anywhere else, and this goes for all cars with manual transmissions), always slip your gearshift into neutral. Keep your foot off the clutch pedal as much as you can.

★ ★ ★

Dear Mike: My 1973 Vega keeps blowing exhaust manifold gaskets. I've had the Chevy people put on two so far. What can I do now?—POPPER

Dear Popper: Might be a warped manifold or an irregular mating surface on the block. Next time the gasket blows, have the mechanic check both.

★ ★ ★

Dear Mike: Ever since we got our 1972 LTD painted a month ago, there's been this whistle. It comes only when the car is moving, and it's not a squeak — it's a whistle that changes tones depending on the car's speed. Can you help us find it?—WHISTLING IN THE DARK

Dear Whistling: Some piece of chrome or an emblem that the paint shop took off must still be loose. Check, and if you don't find the cause right away, mask off likely protrusions with masking tape — one protrusion at a time — so you can track it by a process of elimination.

Dear Mike: We own two cars — a 1976 Fiat 128 and a 1974 Fiat 124. The 128 is a front-wheel drive (fwd), and the 124 has rear drive. The 128 handles beautifully on dry roads, but on ice or even in the wet, it has a tendency to slide around. The 124, which is very similar in weight, size, and engine, gives us no problems at all that way. Both cars have radial tires inflated to the proper pressure. What's your opinion?—SLIDING

Dear Sliding: Fwd cars take a different driving technique. For example, you can't let up on the gas suddenly if you're on glare ice, because engine braking makes the front tires want to stop, so you lose some control. Going around slippery turns you have to feed some gas, otherwise you get the same problem, only worse. I'm not saying fwd cars aren't safe, but you have to learn to drive them properly.

Dear Mike: The center portion of the padded top on my 1970 LTD has come loose. I can see the vinyl material lift up as I drive along about 55 mph (I see it in the shadow of the car near sunset as I commute home). Is there a way to inject new glue under the vinyl cover, or does the whole thing need to come off?—FLAPPING

Dear Flap: The problem is rust and scale on your roof metal. You'll have to to remove the vinyl, sand and paint the metal, then cement the vinyl back in place.

Lose both sets of keys (and their numbers) for some 1975 or later model cars and you're in for a heavy expense. On such cars, the steering column has to be taken out before an ignition key can be made. If you buy a car new, hang onto that key number for dear life. If you buy a car used, have more keys made and ask the locksmith for the key numbers so that you can record them in the safest of record books . . . or on the title.

"Specials" on cottage cheese can make your sour cream topping for baked potatoes cost less money and calories. Dump the cottage cheese in the blender, and let it spin into sour cream. A little lemon juice will give it a tart flavor, if that's what you like. Or, sprinkle in dried parsley or chives for flavoring.

Cholesterol Reduced By New Drug

NEW YORK (AP) — Physicians from three countries, including Canada, report a new drug can safely lower cholesterol levels in human blood.

The new drug, probucol (trade name Lorelco), joins a handful of others that also reduce cholesterol levels. Several now are being tested in a United States study to determine whether the reduction through drugs actually helps to prevent heart attacks. This has not yet been proven for probucol either.

The latest drug, from Dow Pharmaceuticals of Indianapolis, has been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration after 12 years of research in the U.S. and abroad. Treatment usually consists of two tablets daily.

Dr. William Martz of Dow Pharmaceuticals said clinical trials had been conducted for more than eight years on 1,100 patients, with the drug judged free of side effects at a dosage of one gram a day.

Ceramic Teeth Possible

COLUMBUS (UPI) — Scientists at the Battelle research centre say ceramic-root teeth have been successfully implanted in baboons and rhesus monkeys and may become effective substitutes for extracted human teeth.

The Battelle-developed implantable teeth may be ready for clinical dentists within a year, Dr. Craig Hassler said.

The goal of the research, conducted at Battelle's Columbus centre during the past seven years, was to find an effective and permanent prosthesis that could replace a single tooth, or serve as an anchor for bridgework.

DON'T 'SHOOT' NOW

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: I bought a pineapple, cut off the top and planted it in a small container. The main plant hasn't done much, but a beautiful shoot has come out on the side of the parent plant. Will it be okay if I remove the new shoot and replant it or will I kill it? Thank you. — J.F.

DEAR J.F.: Removing the new shoot should be postponed for at least six months. Like all bromeliad "pups," and that's what it would seem has started to form on your parent plant, it should be given at least this much time before it is weaned. Once the new shoot has developed enough strength to survive away from its mother, go ahead and replant without fear of hurting either parent plant or offshoot.

By the way, we've found that you'll have better luck growing the tops of pineapples if you twist off the top, rather than cutting it, and treat it with a bit of root conditioner before planting it in a sterilized potting mix. If you keep it outdoors or in a good sunny window, you'll probably see the fruits of your labor in about a year or two at the most. Unfortunately, the fruit will only be about the size of your fist, but a heck of a lot of fun.

They Hit Gold In Old Crates

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Almost everybody whose name is not Rockefeller has started out in his or her apartment with that fine old period furniture known as Early Shipping Crate. So it should stun no one that after enduring fake fine French furniture, Williamsburg reproductions and revivals of Egyptian, art nouveau and art deco, now we have the Shipping Crate Period re vival.

It all started like this. In 1974, Randall Ward, then 29, had a party in his half of a duplex in Raleigh, N.C. The next afternoon his friend Steve Robertson, 27, bleary-eyed, came over to see if he was alive and if anything was left of the beer and the furniture. There wasn't.

One of them — accounts differ as to which — said, "Let's make a sofa out of packing crates." And they proceeded to do just that.

At the time, Ward and Robertson were trying to make a living by restoration and renovation work. Robertson was just back fro New Zealand (hence the crates) where he'd worked as a sailing teacher. Ward had been selling textiles. Robertson is a graduate of North Carolina State University; Ward from NCSU's textile school.

At the end of 1974, building was a precarious livelihood. Things got rougher and rougher. Christmas came and neither Ward nor Robertson had a dime. That's when they heard about the flea market. They borrowed money from another friend to pay the stall rental at the market. And they dragged the sofa down to sell.

Right away it sold for $130 or so, and the purchaser was all set to cart it off that minute. About then, Ward and Robertson looked at each other and decided quickly: "Just leave it with us and we'll deliver it." With the sofa on the flea market floor the rest of the day, they took an order for another one. They delivered the original that night, collected the money, made a second sofa, delivered it, and collected again. Those sales became their startup money.

They had started just at the right time, when people were turning toward rustic, natural styles — furniture that went with the increasingly popular indoor jungle look. Furniture to sit on while wearing jeans, furniture for putting your boots on. Sturdy. Real. Anti-elite.

By the time Robertson's New Zealand crates ran out and they were tired of pulling out nails, they had enough money to buy North Carolina yellow pine. They leave the knots in but sand the joints and smooth out the splinters. They offer a choice of light or dark stains. The upholstery fabrics originally came from mill ends. Now that they're in the big time, they offer a choice of 25.

The design remains traditional shipping crate construction — lengths nailed onto a frame, nothing fancy but as sturdy as the great outdoors. They give a 10-year warranty on the frame. They've branched out to make a chair ($145), ottoman ($75), square table ($90), coffee table ($70), beds from $135 to $250 and two sizes of dining tables, $125 to $140. They're still making the sofa, now in two sizes, $230 to $295.

Before long, the two were able to hire 14 helpers and set up a small factory in a warehouse in downtown Raleigh's historic "fan" (from the fanlights over the door) district. In June they will add a factory building triple that size, just outside Raleigh.

Beauty Care Lifts Spirits

By JENNIFER ANDERSON

Beauty care takes on more meaning when you do it to improve your morale and lift your spirits. Never is it more beneficial than when you must be confined to a hospital bed.

Some doctors mark the first sign of recovery in their women patients as the day they get concerned about how they look and start to put on their make-up!

DEAR JENNIFER: I am expecting my first baby. I've never been in a hospital before, but I'd like to look my best for the most thrilling experience in my life. Do you have some tips?—Susan T.,

I can give you some tips on what to do before the big day and some advice on what to pack in that all-important bag you'll take with you to the hospital.

—Mild shampoo, instant hair conditioner, along with your hair blower, will take care of your hairdo needs.

—Body lotion, bath powder and soap, or take along a body shampoo that keeps you fresh and comfortable longer. Deodorant, toothbrush and toothpaste are so basic they are usually forgotten.

—As for make-up — take lots of it. All the things you haven't had time to try out before. A light gel make-up, clear tinted gel to go over the top, glosses for the lips and cheeks, eye shadow in clean pastel shades.

—DS

—This is a time to pamper yourself. You may not have a chance to do as much of it when you arrive home with a new baby!

DEAR JENNIFER: I will be in the hospital for 10 days next month. I have long hair, which I usually wear in a bun. What can I do with it during this stay, and how can I keep it from getting oily?—Fran K.,

Use a shampoo designed for oily hair the day you check into the hospital. Don't use setting gels, conditioner or hair spray. Let it squeak clean.

Ali, Queen to Visit

CHICAGO (Reuter) —Muhammad Ali will travel to Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, in July as Queen Elizabeth is visiting the city for celebrations marking her silver jubilee, a spokesman for the heavyweight boxing champion said Saturday.

Ali's visit was arranged by Johnny Walker, a British boxing figure who came here this week to persuade the fighter to promote a benefit for the National Association of Boys Clubs in Great Britain.

Walker has met with representatives of Herbert Muhammad, Ali's manager, and visited Ali on Friday at the champion's training camp in Berrien Springs, Mich.

TRYING TO FIGURE OUT who was where and why, while the equally confused sergeant attempts to make notes is one of the zany scenes from the comedy, See How They Run, playing at McPherson Playhouse Wednesday through Saturday. It's likely to have audiences loopy in an effort to discover which ones are the real reverends in this caper of clergymen. From left, Kim Selody, Adrian Francis, Steven Singer and Brian Tremblay are the dog-collar wearers and Gordon Sheridan is the military guy. Together with a tipsy spinster, cheeky maid and Rev. Toup's ex-actress wife, they make up the cast of Camosun College's final production of the season. Genuine clergymen will be admitted at half price. (Photo by Stuart Kent)

ANTI-METRICS WAR

FORT McMURRAY (CP) — Claire Peden, town board member and former mayor, says he will tear down highway metrication signs as fast as the town can put them up.

"I will fight metrication in the courts if I have to," Peden, 65, a heavy equipment operator for 50 years, said in a recent interview.

March Remembers King

Today, 5,000 persons are to march in honor of King, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, and his struggle to fulfill a dream of racial equality achieved without violence.

King was killed April 4, 1968, on a visit to Memphis while trying to help thousands of predominately black sanitation workers in their strike for higher pay.

A week before his death, King had led a march of strikers that ended in rock-throwing, looting and firebombing. A 16-year-old black youth was killed. King had come back to lead a second march, which he promised would be nonviolent.

Today's march, which was to include many sanitation workers currently facing layoff because of a city budget defecit, was to begin at the downtown Clayborn Temple, the starting point for the 1968 march.

The celebration to "Keep the Dream Alive" was to include a prayer service in front of the Lorraine Motel where a plastic flowered cross marks the balcony where King was shot.

Among those expected were NAACP director-designate Benjamin L. Hooks and Rep. Harold Ford, Tennessee's first black Congressman.

James Earl Ray, who had confessed to killing King, has been meeting recently with investigators for the House Assassinations Committee to elaborate on his claims of conspiracy in the King murder.

Ray, serving a 99-year sentence, has said he was duped into confessing and says the killing was part of a conspiracy.

Ray's latest lawyer, Jack Kershaw of Nashville, said Ray hopes to gain a new trial by co-operating with the committee.

DECISION

Ottawa, March 25, 1977

Following a Public Hearing commencing January 25, 1976 in Vancouver, B.C., the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission announces the following decision.

Decision CRTC 77-217

SAANICH, BRITISH COLUMBIA — 760690800

Davin Enterprises Ltd.

Application for renewal of its broadcasting licence for its cable television undertaking serving Saanich, British Columbia, expiring September 30, 1977.

Decision: APPROVED

The Commission renews this licence from October 1, 1977 to March 31, 1979, subject to conditions to be specified therein. This period will enable the Commission to consider renewal of this licence at same time as those of other cable television licences in the region.

This licence is also subject to the condition that the licensee own, as a minimum, the local head-end, the amplifiers and the drops to houses and apartment buildings.

The Commission authorizes the distribution of CBUFT on channel 3 for an interim period expiring November 1, 1978, or until such time as the new CBC television station in Victoria commences broadcasting, at which time the licensee must distribute CBUFT on channel 4.

With regard to the on channel distribution of CHEK-TV, the licensee is reminded that it must provide remedial action where necessary to maintain a good quality service or apply to the Commission to use a suitable channel.

In its application the licensee has proposed to operate an audio community channel. The Commission APPROVES this proposal on the understanding that the community channel presently provided on the basic service will be maintained. The licensee must advise the Commission of the channel on which it proposes to distribute the audio community programming.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

By and large, the world's top-ranking bridge players are nice guys and gals when removed from the bridge table. But, at the table, it is often another matter, for when they are preoccupied with the stresses and strains of tournament play, they are completely immersed in their "work"; and they often don't have the time or inclination to be pleasant to "outsiders."

At the National Championships held a few years ago, a lady approached Tournament Director Phil Wood, and inquired: "Is there a famous and nice expert I could kibitz?" Phil replied: "Which kind do you want? Nice or famous? We don't have both."

Actually Phil was wrong — there were at least a couple of nice and famous experts around. One of them was internationalist Norman Kay, of Philadelphia. Here is an example of Kay in action. Admittedly, he wasn't nice to his opponents, but while precariously walking a tightrope, he had no time to be nice to anyone. Kay was sitting South.

On West's opening lead of the diamond king, East initiated a "come-on" signal by playing the eight. West continued with the diamond ace, East dropping the deuce. To trick three West led the diamond jack, Kay ruffing with dummy's queen. East discarded the club deuce.

The normal play at this point would be to lead a trump off dummy. Had Kay done this he would have gone down, for West, upon taking his ace (which he figured to have for his opening bid), would have returned a diamond, which East would have ruffed.

At trick four declarer led a spade to his king, after which he played back the spade ten, overtaking with dummy's ace. Then, with his heart in his mouth, he led the queen of spades. When East followed suit, declarer discarded his remaining diamond. Now, at long last, he led a trump off dummy, South's king being taken by West's ace. Whatever West now played back, he could not prevent declarer from making the rest of the tricks (if a fourth diamond were led, South would overruff East).

Incidentally if there are those who think that East could have defeated the contract by discarding a spade (instead of a club) on the third diamond lead, they are in error. Declarer would still have made his contract by overruffing East, and then laying down thhe trump king.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"You've got all quarters, but I've only got nickels," said Jack. "Let's have a dollar, and then we'll both have the same."

Jill shook her head. "No way," she replied. "But I tell you what. Give me a buck and then we'll both have the same number of coins."

(Answer tomorrow)

Friday's answer: The bill was for $84.31.

Chestnuts Tell Time to Sow

Horse-chestnut leaves expanding are one sure sign that general growing conditions are improving rapidly. Since the removal of those fine trees next to the first Victoria Press building on Douglas Street, I have relied on two smaller horsechestnuts on Burnside Road. A week ago they showed green' before the end of the week the first leagues opened.

To me, this means that now the sowing of hardy annual seeds outdoors will not be only possible but successful.

Many gardeners like to grow annuals by this method, for there is little need for transplanting seedlings, and the plants will be sturdier than when raised under indoor conditions in the home.

Most important is to sow the seeds as thinly as possible for they must have space to develop, preferably without moving.

First let us see what kind of annuals are considered as "hardy." A brief list includes Sweet Alyssum, Calendula (Pot, or Scotch Marigold), Cornflower, Larkspur, Candytuft, and the kind of Dianthus called China Pinks. There are others in hardy annual lists.

A sunny place is needed, for the plants have a lot of growing to do before making a floral display. Prepare the soil by breaking with a hoe, then raking fine. If sandy, the growth will be faster than in heavy clay loam, but a top dressing of compost later in early summer helps to maintain moisture around the roots.

An effective way to display hardy annuals in a bed or border is to mark off the areas for the different kinds according to height, color and general habit. Don't forget that foliage is part of the plant's picture. Have one kind of plant merging into the next group, not a rigid pattern of squares.

Seeds which are large enough to handle separately can be put in an inch or more apart; finer ones two or three to a square inch of space.

After germination, thin out to the strongest seedlings. Again according to kind, allow two or four inches between plants.

Label each batch so that you know what kind of seedlings you are looking for by the time they germinate. Each has a distinctive appearance. There is pleasure in recognizing them.

When two pairs of true leaves have expanded above the two seed leaves, you will even be able to lift some seedling plants to transfer to other spots in the border. Doing this on an overcast day, with soil around the roots, will cause no setback.

Seeds must be covered according to their size. Very fine seed such as Alyssum has a fine scattering of soil over them. Larger ones like Calendula or Scotch Marigold will like about a quarter-inch covering.

All need to be lightly firmed (with a piece of flat wood) so that contact is made between seed and soil yet not enough to harden the soil or exclude all air.

Seed sowings are the only kind of plantings where surface sprinkling is beneficial. There must be dampness in the soil where the seeds lie, yet the soil immediately below must be free of saturation. Moisture at greater depths will become available later to the roots as they extend in their search for nutrients.

In dry sunny weather, light sprinkling from a syringe or watering-can may be necessary each day.

We're 20 B Years Old?

New York Times

NEW YORK — Scientists at the University of Chicago have determined that the universe may be as much as 20 billion years old, considerably older than most current estimates.

The latter have tended to range from 10 billion to 15 billion years. The new finding suggests that the Milky Way galaxy of stars began forming at least 10 billion and possibly 20 billion years ago, after the earlier, explosive birth of the universe.

The estimate is based on calculations of how much radioactive rhenium 187 has decayed since that element was first formed early in the history of the galaxy. This form, or isotope, of that rare metal has an extremely long half-life of 40 billion years. That is, half a given amount decays in that time.

It is assumed that rhenium 187 began to be formed from lighter elements during stellar explosions early in the history of the galaxy whose billions of stars are partly visible as the Milky Way. Such explosions, known as supernovas, are thought to generate a number of the heavier elements.

The Chicago scientists, from laboratory tests at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory of the University of California, have estimated how much rhenium 187 was originally formed, relative to other isotopes of rhenium, notably rhenium 185, which does not decay.

Torture Charged In S.W. Africa

LONDON (AP) — Some political opponents of South African rule in South-West Africa have been held without trial and tortured, Amnesty International said Sunday.

The London-based human rights organization made the accusation in a report issued on the treatment of prisoners in South-West Africa, also known as Namibia.

South-West Africa is a sparsely populated territory administered by South Africa's white-minority government under a mandate of the old League of Nations. The United Nations has repudiaed the mandate and demanded that free elections be held in the territory.

"The allegations are totally unfounded and ridiculous," Gen. Mike Geldenhuys said. "There are very few political detainees in South-West Africa."

In the report Sunday, Amnesty International said: "Persistent reports received over a period of months indicate that the use of torture is institutionlized in Namibia. It is employed amost on a routine basis by secuity police during interrogation of political detainees."

ITALIANS FLEE QUAKE

UDNIE, Italy (AP) — Hundreds of villagers fled from their homes Sunday as northeastern Italy's earthquake belt was shaken by a series of tremors. A severe quake in the area last May killed about 1,000 persons.

No injuries were reported in the latest shocks. Tremors also were recorded in parts of neighboring southern Austria.

A policeman in Udine, which was devastated by the May 6 quake, said "the people in the area fled to the countryside in panic."

Victims Freed

And in Genoa, left-wing kidnappers freed the son of a wealthy shipping family on Palm Sunday after payment of what was reported to be "a substantial ransom."

"It was a terrible experience," said Navone. "I wouldn't wish anything like it on my worst enemy."

Ban Rusty Tubs, Says Admiral

OTTAWA (CP) — The major trading countries of the world should band together to close their ports to poorly-built and operated ships in efforts to combat pollution on the high seas.

Rear-Admiral Robert Timbrell, head of an inland shipping association, said in a recent interview that this would be one of the most effective ways to raise world ship and crew standards. There seemed to be growing public support for tough action like this following a string of marine pollution accidents along the U.S. east coast.

The DMA, which represents 18 domestic shipping companies with more than 150 vessels, has also been urging the government to support creation of a substantial Canadian deep-sea fleet.

Timbrell said the quality of Canadian ships and crews are high and this is a factor the government should consider in transporting goods into and out of the country. The 57-year-old DMA president retired from the armed forces four years ago as commander of maritime command in Halifax.

International standards for ship and crew quality lag behind similar world rules for aviation developed by the International Civil Aviation Organization, he said.

The major trading nations in North America and Europe might force world improvements by agreeing among themselves to block entry to their ports to ships not meeting high standards. Already Canada has rules that gave the government this power.

But it was difficult for Canada to enforce its anti-pollution rules on vessels passing through its territorial waters bound for U.S. ports.

U.S. marine pollution laws are not considered as tough as Canada's. Canadian officials suggest many U.S. shipowners with vessels registered outside the country have succeeded in forcing Washington to drag its feet on new international standards.

But Timbrell said he senses a groundswell of public opnion building in the U.S. behind tougher rules. It was support from the flying public that helped lead to strong international aviation safety rules.

Shipping companies now can register their ships in countries with low standards and "pick up a few people off the street and away you go," he said.

There were minimum standards to be met for marine insurance and regulations on collisions at sea had been set by the Intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization (IMCO), a United Nations - recognized body that sets shipping standards.

But international standards on building, maintaining and operating ships and enforcing regulations have not yet been accepted at the UN level, the DMA president said.

Denying entrance to ports to ships that refuse to meet night operators," Timbrell high standards should succeed in weeding out "fly-by-night operators," Timbrell said.

Most ships needed three officers to share duty on the bridge. But some operated with less which was a safety hazard.

Sheer Perfection In Narciso Yepes

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The delicate, pure voice of the classical guitar is a respite and a joy in a time when the ear is constantly assaulted by the coarseness of over-amplified sound.

Sheer perfection of the kind that is expressed in an exquisitely painted miniature or the subtlties of a Turner watercolor, is to be found in the music of Narciso Yepes, famed Spanish guitarist now appearing with the Victoria Symphony.

Sunday's performance with Laszlo Gati and the orchestra, of Joaquin Rodrigo's Concierto de Aranjuez, was filled with subtle yet sparkling color, the balance between soloist and orchestra almost always satisfactory, the continuous dialogue between guitar and various orchestral voices, clear and expressive.

Yepes establishes a vitality of rhythm, a positiveness of statement and a fullness and luminosity of one that belives his quiet self-effacing manner on stage.

Three unaccompanied encores revealed still more of his great artistry in phrasing, expressiveness, command of dynamic subtlties and astounding brilliance of execution.

For the major orchestral work on this last pair of concerts of the subscription season, Gati has chosen one that well suits his interpretive talents, the "Peacock" Variations on a Hungarian Folk Song by Zoltan Kodaly.

This strongly colorful and rhythmically vital music, thicly orchestrated and evocative in its idiomatic content, generally fares well in this performance, with fine work from the percussion here as well as in Mayt by B.C.-born composer Norman Symonds.

Dances from The Three-Cornered Hat by de Falla are somewhat marred by imprecision. Incisive clarity of entry is not always forthcoming and therefore the effect at times tends to be blurred.

There is nevertheless, some good work in the string section and particularly neatly played passages by the English horn. Brasses here and in the Kodaly as well, while technically proficient, too often dominate overmuch with a consequent upsetting of the balance of the tutti.

Music of two Canadian composers constitutes the rest of the program. In both cases it is bright, melodically inventive and especially in the case of the Symonds work, interesting.

Carnival Overture by Oskar Morawetz was given a rather pedestrian performance but the Maya, with its jazz-related motifs, had more vitality and quality of inspiration.

Fire Blacks Out CBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — It will be between two days and a week before full TV and FM radio service will be restored to Vancouver Island following a fire which destroyed CBC transmitters on Mount Seymour early Sunday morning.

CBC Regional Engineer Jim Wighton said today engineers were already patching together a makeshift group of transmitters to replace those destroyed in the fire.

Damage in the blaze, which destroyed four transmitters and a microwave relay in the mountaintop station, is estimated at between $2 million and $3 million.

Wighton said AM radio service was restored by 8 a.m. Sunday by B.C. Telephone, which ran the program in by telephone line.

The program was originally relayed to Vancouver by the Seymour microwave unit, he said.

English and French television service was restored in Vancouver by hooking it up to local cablevision, he said.

The television service is so far limited to Vancouver, Wighton said. "People in areas like Port Alberni, Ucluelet, Chilliwack, Hope, Yale, Bowen Island and Squamish aren't getting any yet," he said. "Their only way of getting service was through the transmitter."

The same applies to Greater Victoria, he added.

But regular programming on Victoria's CHEK Television, which carries both CBC and CTV programs, is unaffected by the knocked-out transmitters.

CHEK production manager Roy Gardner said today the station receives its CBC service not via the transmitters but by B.C. Tel microwave feed.

CHEK carries approximately 20 per cent of the usual CBC programming output.

CBC is bringing in an FM radio transmitter originally slated for Penticton today, Wighton said. They are also returning another FM transmitter which will probably be installed today, he said.

"It won't be full power, but it will be back to normal," he said.

And CBC in Kelowna is loaning Vancouver a Channel 2 transmitter which will also arrive today, Wighton said.

North Vancouver chief fire prevention officer Jerry Waddell said the cause of the fire is not immediately known.

Minnesota North Stars and Chicago Black Hawks finished as they played through most of the National Hockey League schedule. Both lost two weekend games, but it didn't matter. They are in the weak Smythe Division and both qualified for playoffs, which open on four fronts Tuesday. As expected, Montreol Canadiens finished in style, setting a flock of records. Page 14.

Que. Breakaway Gains Ground: Poll

MONTREAL (CP) — Support for Quebec independence by Quebec voters has grown slightly while support for the Parti Quebecois is at an all-time high, concludes a poll conducted by CBC radio.

In the CBC Sunday Morning Quebec Survey, 32.4 per cent of respondents to the poll said they would support independence if Quebec maintained economic ties with the rest of Canada.

About 12 per cent of respondents said they would support independence "if the Quebec government were not able to arrange such an economic association."

However, to a previous question on the independence option without consideration of possible economic association, 16.5 per cent said yes to independence.

Professor Maurice Pinard of McGill University, a consultant on the poll, said the figures indicate the importance of the wording to be used in a future government referendum on independence. He added that the 16.5 per cent figure indicates "only a very slow growth in support for independence," if data from opinion surveys of the last 15 years is compared with results of the latest poll:

The poll shows the highest popularity ever for the Parti Quebecois, with 57 per cent saying they would vote for the PQ in a provincial election. The opposition Liberal Party and the Union Nationale trailed with 21 per cent and 19 per cent respectively.

Meanwhile, only 37 per cent of Parti Quebecois supporters said they favor independence.

Asked how they feel things are going in Quebec right now, 42 per cent answered very well or quite well. Professor Pinard noted that this is up substantially from 25 per cent in a poll conducted just before the Parti Quebecois came to power Nov. 15.

Support for the federal Liberal government is also high, with 52 per cent of respondents indicating satisfaction with the federal government.

Sixty-seven per cent of respondents said they have "a lot" or "some" confidence in Prime Minister Trudeau, and 62 per cent expressed the same confidence for Premier Levesque.

Cancer Forum Slated

The Victoria Times and the Canadian Cancer Society are once again joining forces to present an open forum this month entitled "Cancer Is a Family Affair."

The free forum will be held Monday, April 18, in the Newcombe Auditorium of the Provincial Museum and will deal with the necessity of open discussion within the family about the disease and related symptoms leading to early diagnosis and treatment.

In addition to two films — Checkpoint and BSE — a distinguished panel of experts will be on hand to answer written questions from the audience. Those taking part will be: Dr. Peter Coy, director of the Victoria Cancer Clinic: Dr. Gordon Lott, physician and surgeon: Dr. Malcolm Bridgen, medical oncologist: Mrs. N. Barber, RN, Victoria Cancer Clinic: and Wilfred Burton, executive officer, Canadian Cancer Society, Victoria.

While admission to the forum will be free, the limited seating capacity of the auditorium makes it necessary to limit admission to those who have obtained tickets prior to April 18.

There will be 500 tickets available and they can be obtained at the Victoria Times office, 2621 Douglas, or from the Canadian Cancer Society office at 857 Caledonia from this Wednesday afternoon on.

Tickets may also be ordered by mail through a coupon which will appear in an ad in the Victoria Times commencing Wednesday. Sorry, but we cannot accept telephone orders for tickets.

Due to the limited number of seats available, all those interested in attending the forum are urged to order or pick up their tickets as soon as possible from Wednesday afternoon on.

Settlement Made In Export Gas Row

Settlement of an international dispute which threatened to land both B.C. and the Vancouver-based pipeline company Westcoast Transmission in court was announced today.

The negotiated agreement — revealed by Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Jim Chabot — appears, however, to be similar to terms Premier Bill Bennett said earlier the province wanted to avoid.

Under it, the province has agreed to allow an Alberta natural gas firm to take up the slack of a major gas contract with the U.S. which B.C. can no longer fulfil.

Under the terms of the agreement worked out at a meeting in Victoria last week Pan-Alberta Gas Ltd. will supply to Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Washington State a minimum of 104 million cubic feet a day and a maximum of 200 million cubic feet a day for the next 12 years.

B.C. is committed to transmitting 104 million cubic feet a day of Alberta gas to the U.S. gas company for 12 years, although this may rise to 145 million cubic feet a day at B.C.'s option.

For the first five years of the 12 year period B.C. is also committed to transmit 55 million cubic feet a day to the U.S., but that part of the contract is up for re-negotiation after five years at which time B.C. hopes to be able to supply that gas on its own.

Both Bennett and Energy Minister Jack Davis earlier expressed reservations at a lengthy contract with Alberta and favored a short term, three-year-agreement for Alberta to supply surplus gas to the U.S.

In 1969, B.C. signed a 20-year-agreement with the U.S. to supply 809 million cubic feet a day of natural gas.

In recent years flooding of gas fields in Northern B.C. has drastically decreased B.C.'s gas supply and in 1976, the shortfall on the U.S. contract reached 226 million cubic feet a day.

Alberta, which has surplus gas, offered to take up the slack but the B.C. government balked at giving its approval saying it would reduce the incentive for B.C. gas companies to increase exploration efforts in the north east of the province.

Under the 20-year contract with the U.S. the only excuse for not supplying the committed gas was that B.C. didn't have enough for its own use.

But Northwest Pipeline argued that B.C. was legally bound to accept the Alberta offer of surplus gas and threatened to take the government to court to force the point.

Squatters Jailed

Four squatters on MacMillan Bloedel land west of Shawnigan Lake were ordered to jail today for 10 days for contempt of B.C. Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan had given Fred Anderson, Peter Anderson, Heather Cousins and Richard Houle 30 days to vacate the property in an order Jan. 27.

But David Williams, counsel for MacMillan Bloedel, told Ruttan they were still on the property.

Ruttan said the continued flouting of the court has "turned this into a mockery of the administration of justice."

None of the four appeared in court today but lawyer Bruce McConnan appeared for Fred Anderson seeking an adjournment until this afternoon because Anderson had told him he couldn't start his car this morning.

The four persons have been living near Wild Deer Creek, 10 miles south of Duncan and nine miles west of Shawnigan.

U.K. Airport in Chaos As Staff Bans Overtime

LONDON (Reuter) — Heathrow airport faced chaos today with thousands of travellers stranded because of a ban on overtime and night shift work by maintenance engineers of the state-run British Airways.

A British Airways spokesman said Sunday night that all domestic and European flights will be cancelled at least for 24 hours with some intercontinental flights affected also.

About 10,000 passengers were hit by the ban Sunday. Many were unable to find seats on other airlines and spent the night on the airport floor.

The spokesman said that if the ground staff continues its unofficial action the company will probably be forced within a few days to cancel all flights. The action is costing British Airways an estimated $4.5 million a day.

The men, members of the Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers, are refusing to work night,overtime and, from today, all weekend shifts, in support of demands for separate negotiating rights and more pay.

Intercontinental flights cancelled today include those to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Hong Kong, Karachi, Doha, Melbourne, Khartoum and Mexico.

British Airways' officials feared chaos at Heathrow might increase today when the engineers all plan to report for the day shift simultaneously. Usually the day is divided into three shifts.

The airline has appealed to them to stay at home unless on duty. "There is just no room for them," said an airport security official.

Another worry is that as the number of cancellations increase, traffic will be brought to a standstill and the chaos spread to other airlines.

The engineers are holding a meeting of union officials later today to decide what steps to take next. The union executive has not endorsed the ban.

MYSTERY POLLUTION KILLS BIRDS

SEATTLE (AP) — More than 300 oil-soaked gulls which washed ashore on the Washington coast near Willapa Bay in southern Washington Saturday were being cleaned while an unknown number of others were dead on the beach, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said Sunday.

"No source of pollution is evident or has been located," said Lieutenant J. G. Robert Stevens.

Stevens said the birds were first discovered on the beach near Grayland, Wash., Saturday morning by area residents and were still washing up on the beach Sunday.

The federal department of interior is in charge of the bird recovery operation and has set up a clinic at the Long Island Wildlife Refuge, he said.

Polygraph Curbs Urged By Police Commission

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

B.C. Police Commission recommendations calling for tighter controls on the use of lie detectors in the province are expected to come before the legislature later this month.

Commission chairman Dr. John Hogarth said today he is completing a report to Attorney General Garde Gardom on the question of polygraph use in B.C.

Hogarth said the report calls for a number of legislative changes.

"Obviously it's too late to do anything this session (of the legislature) ... my hope is that the minister may see fit to table it as a kind of green paper that will stimulate discussion," he said.

Hogarth said the paper consists of the findings and recommendations of a special task force which has been studying the matter, plus a number of recommendations from the commission itself.

He said the task force essentially calls for a polygraph board to keep the charlatans out, while the commission has tempered that with more conservative recommendations.

Hogarth said he could not discuss the paper until after it has been tabled in the legislature but, "there are some real problems (with lie detector

REVENGE AT LAST FROM PESKY BELL

GILLINGHAM, England (UPI)—On the day he retired Horace Whittell brought to work the alarm clock which awakened him at 6 a.m. for 47 years and flattened it under an 80-ton press.

"It was a lovely feeling," said 62-year-old Whittell, a Chatham Dockyard worker since 1930.

"I came to loathe that bell. It had to be loud to have any effect on me. Now I shall lie in until 9 a.m. every day."

Coffee Smugglers Burned Alive

NAIROBI (AP) — Ugandan troops have executed a gang of coffee smugglers by burning them alive on an island in Lake Victoria, the Kenyan newspaper The Nation said today.

The paper, quoting what it called reliable sources, said the smugglers were captured while running coffee across the lake from Uganda into Kenya for shipment abroad.

The men were taken to Kigulu Island by the soldiers "and told to lie down," The Nation said. Then "they were covered with empty sacks and petrol was poured over them. They were then set alight."

The reported executions were believed to be in retaliation for the killing of a soldier by smugglers in an earlier clash, the paper added.

In that incident, a Ugandan army helicopter opened fire on a smugglers' boat on Lake Victoria. The smugglers fired back, killing the soldier and forcing the helicopter to crashland on Kigulu.

Several smugglers have been reported slain in clashes with the Ugandan military and between rival gangs in recent weeks as coffee smuggling has mushroomed into a major racket in East Africa because of high world coffee prices.

Ugandan army helicopters have patrolled Lake Victoria and the Kenyan border in the last few weeks in a growing campaign to smash the smuggling gangs. Kenyan officials have also mounted a major anti-smuggling operation.

Both governments are alarmed at the escalation of a racket that robs them of much needed foreign currency from official coffee exports.

Authorities here are also concerned that low-grade Ugandan coffee smuggled into Kenya is mixed with high-grade Kenyan coffee and then sold on the international market with a Kenyan label.

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Happiness is lying on your tummy with your sights on Bisley.

Never mind that the ground is hard and that the wind is chill as it knifes across Heal's Range.

For 18 of the 19 youngsters bellied down and cradling brand-new Australian target rifles in their arms, participation in the Bisley matches in Britain in July is a certainty.

One will stay home.

The group of 18 boys and one girl from army cadet corps across Canada spent the week at Heal's training under their coach, Maj. Dick Hampton, of Woodlawn, Ont.

They took part in a Dominion Rifle Association match against cadets of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

"Yes," he declared, pointing to the nearest marksman, 18-year-old Charles Jackson of Victoria, who was firing his last shots of the day.

Jackson, a member of the PPCLI cadet team, was teamed with fellow cadet Ian Whitehead, 17, and they shot 101 and 104, respectively, out of a possible 105.

The lowest score of 10 practising that afternoon was 95.

"It makes my job nasty," Hampton commented, thinking of the one who will be dropped.

She belongs to 2370 RCAC (10th Field Artillery).

"There's never been a girl on the team and I'd like to be the first."

How's her shooting?

The cadets are from six provinces. Four each from B.C., Saskatchewan and Quebec, three from Ontario and two each from Alberta and Nova Scotia.

Most have been shooting two years or less.

In full bore competition, everyone uses the same ammunition, .308 or 7.62 mm, and the Canadian team rifle is the Sportco, specially designed for target shooting.

Each is worth about $300 with sights.

Heading the team is Lieut.-Col. Vince Lilley, of Vernon, who said the shooters found their first use of Heal's range to be wholly satisfactory after being accustmed to indoor winter practice.

He expects to bring next year's team here also.

UVic Study May Boost Asia Diet

Two University of Victoria scientists and a Duncan farmer have teamed together in an intensive two-year research program that could significantly affect the diets of people in Malaysia, China and India.

UVic doctors Trevor Trust and Tom Buckley are sharing a $94,000 grant from the International Development Research Centre, a federal Crown corporation, to study ways of making carp grow more quickly. Acting as a consultant is Duncan farmer and biochemist, Dr. T. D. Groves.

Buckley said today although carp are an important source of protein in Malaysia and other countries, they are not raised scientifically as are salmon in B.C.

Buckley said that whatever feeds the researchers come up with will have to be not only effective but cheap as well, are now getting results by feeding their carp grass.

"The diets used to feed salmon here would be extremely expensive in Malaysia," he said. "Obviously we can't give them ground hamburger or something like that."

Buckley said a similar study is now under way in Malaysia, but the UVic research is expecdted to provide the fine details.

He said the university received the research grant because it has a combined department of microbiology and biochemistry "and this gives us an unusual advantage." Both a micro-biologist and a biochemist are needed in the study.

Buckley said biochemistry will reveal how the carp grows while microbiology will determine the role of micro-organisms within the fish.

The UVic researchers are working with an initial study group of 100 carp that are the size of goldfish.

Carp are not usually eaten in Canada but are considered a delicacy in Malaysia and other countries.

Buckley said that while the research may have no application in Canada at present, the time may come when carp are raised commercially here.

"They probably would be a fairly inexpensive source of food," he said. "I think that Canadians are going to eat more fish in the future but it's going to take some time."

Buckley added that the project is expected to provide comparative data for the study of other fish—species, such as salmon.

ARSON CHARGES LAID

The pair and two companions also face a number of breaking and entering counts.

The two youths to be charged in connection with the blaze at British Upholstery Ltd., 546 Herald, are both 16. One of their companions, who faces five breaking and entering charges, is 12.

Police and fire officials, meanwhile, are still investigating four other arson fires which occurred early Saturday morning in the James Bay district.

And Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons revealed today several more deliberately-set fires — none serious — took place Sunday afternoon and evening.

Shortly before 12:30 a.m., firemen responded to a car fire at the Eagles hall at 90 Dock. As they fought that fire, a second call came for a fire at a tool shed at 77 Dock.

A fibreglass boat valued at $5,000 was destroyed in that fire, and then a car parked behind the same apartment burst into flames.

Navy League to Fight For True Blue Cadets

The Navy League of Canada will appeal to the federal government's defence committee in its fight to prevent Royal Canadian Sea Cadets being put in the controversial green safari uniform.

The national council of the league, meeting in Moncton, N.B. on the weekend, unanimously voted to have representatives appear before the committee.

National president Bob Hendy of Toronto reiterated that, in a survey, thousands of cadets had written, stating they want to retain the blue seaman uniform they now wear.

Some had made it clear they will leave the organization if the green safari uniform is forced on them.

Vancouver Island personnel attending the meeting were Jack Koyl, immediate past national president; Gerry Bishop and Pat Dufour, board of management members, all of Victoria, and Harry Waring of Duncan, president of the league's Vancouver Island division.

Tom Hallet of St. John's, Nfld., chairman of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet committee, said the switch in uniforms will destroy morale, both in cadet corps and the adult volunteers in the league who support the movement.

Brig.-Gen. R. G. Therriault of Ottawa assured the league sea cadets will not be issued the green uniforms until the army and air force cadets had all received the new issue.

He agreed the present uniforms, if the league is unsuccessful in its fight to keep them, could be used for special occasions by bands, honor guards and color parties.

If the sea cadets are forced into the green uniforms the league will insist that distinctive features such as the seaman's cap, gunshirt and white belt be retained.

28 New Jobs Created

The federal Canada Works program has created 28 jobs in Esquimalt-Saanich with a grant of $163,370, including $41,580 to expand the Sidney Silver Threads Activity Centre.

Eight people will be hired to expand the centre on Resthaven Drive.

A grant of $25,578 will hire five people to renovate and repair the Sanscha Community Hall.

The Peninsula Community Association will receive $45,864 to hire five counsellors to work with teen-agers in the Brentwood Bay and Cadboro Bay areas.

University of Victoria will get $8,484 to hire five people to clear and develop walking paths and to clear the forest area for recreation use.

The Tsscycum Indian band will receive $34,864 to hire five people to repair existing housing, build two new homes and repair drainage systems on the reserve.

Earlier, 41 jobs were created through a grant of $288,000 to the Victoria-Oak Bay region.

DONATIONS MAY TOP $32,000

Firefighters over the weekend turned their energies in a different direction and came up with record-breaking amount in their muscular dystrophy campaign.

Campaign vice-chairman Fred Metters of the Victoria department said the total should exceed $32,000.

Donations are being counted with returns still trickling in so the exact figure won't be known for a day or two, he said.

"The drive was quiterewarding. We got a lot more than we thought we would," Metters said.

Firefighters from Saanich, Oak Bay, Victoria, the Department of National Defence, Victoria Airport, Colwood, Langford, View Royal, Central Saanich and Sidney participated in the campaign on Friday and Saturday.

Q. Could you please give me an address where I could obtain a Spanish penfriend as I wish to improve my Spanish? A.M.

A. The best way we know of is to write a letter to the editor of a Spanish daily newspaper. Try the editor (El Director) of ABC, 61 Servano, Madrid. (ABC is Spain's largest daily); Diario de Barcelona, 49 Muntaner, Barcelona, or Las Provincias, 19 Pinter Pinazo Avenida, Valencia. Barcelona and Valencia are both on Spain's sunny Mediterranean coast. What better place to make a friend?

Q. Could you please give me the full address of Pueblito to Canada, Toronto? A.J.F.

A. The address is Pueblito Canada Inc., 230 Bloor Street West, Toronto, Ontario.

PARTIAL ECLIPSE of the moon was captured at 8:46 p.m. in this shot by the University of Victoria's observatory on Sunday. Occurring two or three times a year, a partial eclipse of the moon is rarely discernible in Victoria. Sunday's eclipse lasted from 7:30 to 9:06 p.m.

TEA HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Cause of the blaze which broke out at about 9:30 p.m. is unknown. The small tea house had not been used for some time.

But Why Did They Murder Mister Spock?

TELEVISION, A MEDIUM which we allowed into our house only with grave misgivings, has grown on us through the years. I don't mean that we sit gazing at TV's window on the world for all of each and every evening. But there are shows we like, and to miss one of them can be a minor tragedy.

We're still wondering how the crew of the Starship Enterprise saved its inter-planetary vessel from an awesome space monster that looked rather like a stretched-out bullfrog with a warty hide and a mouthful of fangs. I spurred our car along 100 miles of highway in hopes of catching that show, but too fast wasn't fast enough.

All we salvaged was an exploded view of the monster and a going-away glimpse of First Officer Spock's pointy Vulcan ears.

Star Trek is lost to us, and more's the pity. They aren't making it any more, and since Channel II isn't in our cablevision package, we can't even watch the repeats. When nights are long and entertainment spotty, we miss Mr. Spock and his space-probing colleagues in their ducky uniforms.

For better or worse, television characters become friends. And when a tried and tested friend of long association is snatched away untimely, it hurts.

Take John-Boy in that marathon idyll, The Waltons. We watched John-Boy grow up. We were with him in spirit when he went off to college, and launched a rural newspaper, and toiled by a late-burning light on a novel that took the devil's own time to get itself finished.

Now his masters have snatched him off to New York after some mighty permanent-sounding goodbyes to his family, and I suspect that a lot of water will flow down good old Rockfish Creek before we see him again.

This, in fact, has become a season of television partings. We could spare John-Boy, though regretfully, but how are we going to manage without Mary Tyler Moore?

The show of that name was one of our enduring favorites. We looked forward to it. We liked its people — newsroom chief Lou, Murray the newswriter, Mary herself, even that egomaniac anchorman, Ted Baxter.

They lived. They moved. They endeared themselves. And now they are gone, their show vanished into the limbo that waits for a series deemed by the high priests of the studios to have run its course even though its ratings remain high.

Why do they do it to us? Why did they marry off Nurse "Hot-Lips" Houlihan of M-A-S-H, a hard-nosed lady of illusion whose semi-single state lent pizazz to a series that has brightened many an otherwise barren TV evening?

I don't know, but I hope the mysterious "they" who rule on these matters will stay their hands while we've still got something worth watching.

We resent that sort of thing. We want our shows to last!

I have yet to touch on the most grievous cut of all. No more Upstairs, Downstairs. The final instalment of the mannered English series has been screened, and I doubt we will see its like again.

We didn't merely follow that absorbing television tale with its shuttlings between servants' hall and masters' drawing-room in an England of which only vestigial traces remain. We were drawn into it by clever scripting and polished acting to the point where I felt a sympathetic pang in my own gizzard when Hudson the butler crumpled from a heart attack.

A show capable of doing that to a viewer deserves to last. But Upstairs, Downstairs, has shared the common fate, and our Thursday evenings have been robbed of a valued dimension.

There are minor compensasations. All in the Family goes on, with Archie Bunker still the bigot's bigot. They haven't got around to murdering that one yet!

As for the others, television procedures guarantee that we can count on repeats and repeats far into the future.
